SNOW IN MOUNTAIN PILES; STORM WORST IN 30 YEARS

Raged All Throughout New Brunswick and Paralyzed Business

This City Just Emerging from Beneath Huge Drifts—Street Railway Getting the Upper Hand—Practically No Trains Moving, Only One In and One Out All Day—Reports from Provincial Points Tell Story of Severity.

FEATURES OF THE BIG STORM

Worst in New Brunswick in 30 years. City almost isolated. Street Railway tied up. 16 inches of snow on level. Drifts 10 and 15 feet high. Something of a milk famine. Two feet of snow at Chatham.

What is looked on in some parts of New Brunswick, as the worst storm in 30 years ended yesterday afternoon. Had it not been for the telephone and telegraph lines which continued working all through the snow, St. John would have been completely isolated.
