Was it when you believed the Bible, and belonged to to the church?
'Yes Sir.'

'Were you afraid of death then?'
'No, Sir; I thought if I had died I should go to heaven, and be bappy.'
'Suppose you should die now.'
'I should be just as well off.' Have you any children?

Would you prefer that she be trained under the influence of your old or new view.

On, I leave her to her mother. She may teach her what she pleases.'

'Then your wife is a Christian woman.'

'Yes; she holds on.'

Now Bir, I wish to ask you one question more. Suppose that child of yours should come up to you and say, 'Father, which shall I believe, you or mother?' I insist upon a repli.?

Well, I suppose I wou'd say, Go with your mother. — Christian Press. DECEPTION AND SELF-

DECEPTION Don't make believe! Don't try to impress people with the idea that you are a silver piece, when nature only designed you for copper. Isn't there more credit in being a bright penny than a spurious dollar! You may possibly succeed in deceiving the world for a short time, but sooper or later you for a short time, but accept of later you will be thrown aside as false coin. If you are ashamed of your true character, people will begin to look at you suspiciously. An evident lack of self-respect is the very poorest policy for those who are beginning life. The world is naturally cautious a deasily prejudiced, but offer yourself just as you are, undertaking nothing which you do not thoroughly enderstand, and it will find few handles to hang suspicion on. Truth end honesty are worth thousands of dollars of capital. Make no pretensions—don't tilink to increase your market value by addertising. If you are good for anything, people will be pretty likely to find it out; if not, all the beasting that lips can unter will be of no earthly use. You may deceive society, but you cannot deceive yourself. An impostor of any kind is sure to be detected.

breathed, her looks would be elequent enough An orphan! sweet child, like a freil bark on the uncertain sea of life, to battle with the waves of sorrow and disappointment. But a mothers pirit watches over you, and though the canopy of heaven veil her from view, the canopy of heaven veil her from view, yet she is a talismen. The evening hour bears upon its fleering wings your orisons to the shrine of heaven; angels there the record write. Who could harm you? Who could say one crue', unkind word, when they gaze upon you and reflect that you are indeed an orphan? An orphan! What does that word convey? It is but a name, also of to many thrown upon the unfeeling world, trusting to kindness when so little is to be found, heaven shield you from all harm; puck the eaven shield you from all harm ; p'uck the heaven shield you from all harm; puck the thorns from your pathway, and strew sweet flowers. As I watch you on your bended knees, does it not seem an example bidding me to "go and do likewise." And as the sweet words, "Our father," fall from your lips angels a e the listeners. Let it breathe is simple prayer. He who hath said, "Suffer little children to come unto me," will hear your voice, sweet one.—Letsure Hours.

The Love of Home.—It is only shallow minded pretenders who either make distinguished origin a matter of personal merit, or obscure origin a matter of personal repreach. Taunt and scoffing at the humble condition of early life affect robody in America, but those who are foolish enough to indulge in them, and they are generally sufficiently pun ished by public rebuke. A man who is not eashamed of himself, need not be ashamed of his early condition. It did not happen to me to be born in a log cabir; but my elder brothers and sisters were born in a log-cabin, brothers and sisters were born in a lograised among the snow drifts of New Hamp-shire, at a period so early, that when the smoke first rose from its rude chimney, and curled over the frozen hills, there was no similar evidence of a white man's habitation between it and the settlements on the rivers of Canada. Its remains still exist. I make to it an annual visit. I carry my children to it, to teach them the hardships endured by the generations which have gone before them. I love to dwell on the tender recol. lecti ne, the kindled ties, the early affections and the touching parratives and incidents which mingle with all I know of this primitive lawily abode. I weep to think that none of iamily abode. I weep to think that none of those who imbabited it are now among the living; and if ever I am asbamed of it, or if ever I fail in affectionate veneration for him who reared it, and defended it against savage violence and destruction, cherished all the demestic virtues beneath its roof, and, through the fire and blood of a seven years' revolutionary war, shrunk from no danger, no toil, no sacrifice, to serve his country, and to raise his children to a condition better than his own, may my name, and the name of my posterity, he blotted out from the memory of mankind!— Webster.

To MAKE HAND SOAP. - I send you the following recise, which I wish the readers of your paper to have the benefit of as it is of your paper to have the benefit of, as it is considered the best of many: Take of its, of sods, 6 lbs. of fat, 3 lbs. of lime and 4 gallons of water. Put the sods, lime, and water in the boiler, and boil them. Then take it out in something to settle; then put the fat in the boiler and add the water (leaving the settlements behind.) Boil about half-an-hour, or until it is thick. Then take it could be added to the settlements of the contact of the cont out to cool, when it is ready to out as is desired.—Country Gentleman.

Washing Flannels, &c.—I noticed an inquiry in relation to washing flannels, and as an answer, I seed the following:—Make a hot suds with good soft soap, put in the flannels and let them lie a few minutes, then wash thoroughly with the hands. Have ready some boiling water, (acft is best.) dissolve a little blueing, or indigo, and pour on it sufficient of the hot water to cover the goods, put them in and let them remain until cool enough to wring. Dry in the air and iron when slightly damp. Iron on the right side. I have followed this mode for years, there is no bad brestif, that which comefrom the soas being out pitceptibly diagrees able. Much of the disagreeable oder of a late meal may be avoided if the teeth and mouth are well rinsed with warm water, and the tooth-brush is passed across the back part of the tongue. Is some persons, a factor of breath and of the feet alternate. Is others, both are present at the same time. A factid offluvit arises usually, if not always, from three causes; first, it is bereditary, being connected with a scrofulous tants, second, It arises from a want of personal cleanliness; third, it attends a disordered atomach. The second and third suggest their own remadies.

The first is a grevious and mortifying majortuce to all sensitive minds, but it may be remedied to a very considerable extent, by persistent habits of strict personal eleanliness, by large out-door activities, personal regularities, and the temperate use of plain substantial food, carefully avoiding all gross and ranord articles of dirt, suct, choose, pues, proddiags, amoked and fried meats, fish and the like, using often and efficiently the vapor or warm bath, soap and plentiful friction.—
