

should rest in her boarding-house for a week to gain strength to travel; milk and eggs were sent in, and a complete wardrobe of essentials for an invalid cheered her for the journey.

"Annie" is a bright Little Sister who is exceedingly anxious to finish her course at school, but her surly father, a confirmed alcoholic, refused to buy her the necessary books, which the Big Sisters then supplied. Not long after "Annie" told us a story of such shocking abuse by her father that we reported the matter to the police, and the father was sent to jail. This would have meant the end of "Annie's" education, as funds were very low, but the Big Sisters are providing the means for this Little Sister to obtain her diploma.

WHAT YOU CAN DO

You have often longed to be of some real help to someone less fortunate than yourself in order that the sacred mother instinct in you may be satisfied. We give you your opportunity.

It is your privilege to be a Big Sister, to see your Little Sister once a week, to show her an ideal of home-life, to get her a few pleasures, to win her confidence, to raise her ideals that you may help one human being develop her best self.

Your reward will be the love and friendship of your Little Sister and the
