UNIQUE DEVICE TO RAPIDLY HEAT. FLOWING WATER.

Description That Is Peculiarly Valuable at the Present Time-Means by Which the End Sought Is Readily Attained-How This Heating Device Is Made and Used-Simple Arrangement

For persons desiring a quantity of hot water on short notice the water heater, now described will prove particularly *aluable, though it will be found useful on all occasions requir ing hot water, says a writer in the Scientific American. The device is designed to rapidly heat flowing water or if used in connection with a reservoir to heat water circulating therefrom and thus store up a quantity of hot water.

The reservoir or water tank is pro vided with two pipes connected at their lower ends by a U shaped coupling. One of these pipes, which is provided with means for heating the water contained therein, is longer than the other pipe, so that as the water is heated it will flow to a higher level in the tank and the cooler water will pass down through the pipe, thus keeping up a circulation. A discharge cock is connected with the hot water pipe, through which the water may be drawn off as Dyspepsia the Father of Many Ills Unless Promptly Checked and Permanently Cured by Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets.

It is impossible to overestimate the danger of allowing Dyspepsia to go from bad to worse. At first it is simply an uncomfortable feeling, then it grows into a pain, from that to a misery accompanied by the gravest danger to life.

It should be treated right from the start with that one sure cure, Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets. Other medicines may give temporary relief. Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets both give relief and cure permanently. Maurice Best, of Southern Harbour, Nfld., relates an experience that demonstrates its effects on the most severe cases.

"I suffered from Dyspepsia for eight years," says Mr. Best. "I was 'in continual misery. Sometimes I would go off in a faint and for ten or fifteen minutes I would be more dead than alive. The doctors could not cure me and gave me but little help.

A TRIO OF GOOD ONES. Three Stories of More Than Usual News paper Merit.

A few years ago one of the military chaplains at Gibraltar hit on what he thought was a singularly happy idea for inducing his congregation to subscribe more liberally to the offer-tories than was their custom. This was that the men, instead of putting their pennies lato the bag-or, rath er, refraining from doing so-should be permitted to deposit sheets of note paper stating the amounts that they were willing to have deducted from their weekly pay for the benefit of the church. The soldiers appeared to be greatly impressed with the idea, and the following Sunday the offertory bags literally overflowed with their notes of hand. The chap lain was most jubilant at the sight and prior to dismissing the troops, openly thanked them for their generosity. When, however, in the privacy of the vestry he examined the harvest shortly afterward, his jubilation somewhat evaporated. This was because practically every paper he unfolded ran as follows: "T. On one of these rambles he passed a field where only one woman was at work, and asked her where the rest of her companions were With much naivete the woman replied: "They have gone to see the King," "And why did you not with them?" rejoined His Majesty. would not give a pin to see him," replied the peasant. "Besides. fools that are gone to town to see him will lose a day's work by it which is more than I can afford to do, for I have five children to work "Well, then," replied George, putting some money into her hand, 'you may tell your companions who are gone to see the King that the King came to see you." Natives Deserting the Matoppos. According to the Buluwayo Chronicle, the natives living in the Matoppos continue to desert the hills for the Mopani veldt to the south. They assign as a reason for this, the depredations of the baboons and the exhaustion of the light sand loam of the hills. The baboons have been increasing rapidly, and are a source of considerable loss and almost daily annoyance. It is thought, notwith standing that the real reason for the exodus is that the soil in the Mopani veldt is far richer than in the Matoppos, while the climate is possibly somewhat healthier. The harvests were particularly abundant on the banks of the Shashani, the Ovi, Malema Rivers. This large and fer tile tract of country, it is interesting to note, was uninhabited until the European occupation, apparently be cause it was accessible to raids from the south, and perhaps because it was once raided about fifty years It is anticipated that a large native population will soon spread far down the larger tributaries of the Crocodile, and the Matoppos will then be more desolate and lonely than ever.

History Repeated.

In the latest Australian mining news, says The London Daily Chronicle, there is an account of the dis covery of a valuable golden reef in a curious fashion. A dog out walking with his master, a farmer, chased and caught a kangaroo. In the struggle the ground got torn up, and when the farmer arrived on the scene his eye detected some exposed specimens of golden quartz. Further search revelaed a rich reef, and the farmer's bank balance has been considerably increased by his dog's fight with the kangaroo. Thirty years ago long productive Australian goldfield was discovered through a short tempered settler seizing the stone and throwing it at his dog. Returning good for evil, the dog brought the stone back to its master in his mouth. The man looked at it. It was a lump of quartz thickly studded with gold.

"Is Dickens Played Out?" The best answer to the question

"Is Dickens played out?" is given by his original publishers, Messrs. Chapman & Hall, who have been looking into figures and taking a "box of fic" estimate of the author. many years their sales of his books have averaged over a quarter of a million copies, and to these must be added the innumerable issues of the majority that are now out of copy-So there seems every justification for the new biographical edition. As most people would guess, 'David Copperfield' comes second in favor, while the publishers have been able to trace Mr. Martin Harvey on his tour with "The Only Way" by the booksellers' orders for the "Tale of Two Cities," First in favor, of course, comes "Pickwick." (which is not the title of the book.)-London

Thumb Nail Pictures. In collections, centuries old, to be een in both China and Japan are specimens of the most remarkable drawings in the world, pictures of all kinds drawn with the thumb nail. The nails of the thumbs on the left hands of the artists of these are allowed to grow to an enormous length, sometimes to a foot or eighteen inches, and are then pared down to a pen shaped point. Dipping this oddly constructed pen in beautiful vermilion or sky blue ink, the only kinds of ink used in these sacred thumb nail drawings, the artist gracefully outlines his work.

Occasionally the bold touches from the studio of a master in this depart ment of "high art" are life size and are sketched by a few sweeps of the artist's arm. Like other pictures and sketches of the orient, these sacred thumb nail pictures are mounted and rolled up like scrolls.

Some Words. According to the late Richard A. Proctor, says the London Chronicles the phrase "I guess," to English ears so ridiculous, is really identical with the old expression, "I wis," meaning "I know." The word "guess" has changed its meaning entirely in England, but has partly preserved it in America, where of course the native says "I guess" when he is more or less in a state of certainty. There are many other examples of words that have played fast and loose with "g" and "w," such as "guardian" and "warden," "guard" and "ward," "guichet"
