STORIES FROM THE DOCTOR Patient Who Objected to Losing a Leg and Another Who Didn't Care to Live.

"Did' I ever tell you of my experience with the racehorse man?" asked the doctor who was in a reminiscent mood. "It happened shortly after I graduated from the medical school, and more directly concerns a certain surgeon of some reputation, to whom was merely an assistant. The patient had been kicked by a horse and had sustained a serious fracture of the leg. Apparently it was a case for amputation if there ever was one, but the racehorse man wouldn't hear

"The man was young and his mother had come on to look after him, so the surgeon went to her and stated the case. In his opinion amputation was absolutely necessary, and she told him to do whatever was best. With this understanding, he decided to take off the leg, but not to excite his patient by telling him of his intention. That's where he made his mistake. The racehorse man was suspicious, however. He had been told that all idea of amputation had been abandoned, but that an operation would be necessary to remove some splinters of bone, but he evidently still had his doubts and he inquired very particularly as to the time when the operation would be performed. When the time came we found a stranger in his room-a young fellow of about the same age as the patient. "'Friend of mine,' said the racehorse man. 'I want some one I know present. You don't mind do you?'

"The surgeon scowled. "Can't help it, Doc.' went on the racehorse man. Got to have some one I know here, and he's the only one who's got nerve enough to see you use a knife on me without wincing. Are you all ready?"

"The surgeon made the best of the situation and said he was. I was to administer the chloroform, and just as I was about to begin, the patient turaed to his friend, waving me aside for a

"'Jim,' he said, 'the Doc tells me he isn't going to cut off my leg, and that's all right; but you know what kind of a minus zero I'd be in this world with one leg gone. I'm taking no chances. Just you look in the top bureau drawer and get the gun that's lying there. 'Jim did as he was told.

'Now sit over in that corner where you'll be out of the way and keep your yes peeled,' went on the patient. Let 'em carve me up all they want to so long as they don't use a saw, but if they begin taking that leg off, you turn loose with the gun. Understand? If I wake up and find that leg gone, Jim, I'll kill you if I have to follow you to hell on crutches to do it. Now, go ahead, Doc.' Well, gentlemen, that surgeon's face was a study. I saw he had half a mind to throw up the whoie job, but he evidently admired the nerve of the man, for he finally nedded to me to go ahead. But he didn't take off the leg. He removed the bone-splint-ers and did what he could to insure Hatching of the fractured parts and let it go at that. He told me later that he had no board ome, but he had made up his mind to do the best he could under the circumstances. However, the best of physicians and surgeons make mistakes, and the last I heard of the race-horse though with a very decided limp.

"There was no response from the hed: "Kate Wilkinson, you know,' went

"Still silence. "It is a good thing you've been laid up or she'd have made a fool of you as she did of the rest of them," suggested the chum. "I remember you were rather desperately smitten.'

"It seemed to us in the next room as if there was a slight movement under the bedclothes, but that was all. "Her actions have been mply scandalous," was the next reark. "They say she's engaged to three different men now, and if she isn't engaged to a fourth she ought to be, if

Walter S. Verrall Saw Them During the Bg Fire

He Was in Ottawa at the Time-Blaze Was a Grand Sight.

Walter S. Verrall writing to Reginald Miller has the following to say regarding the fire: This week will be a week memorable for nany, many years to citizens of Ottawa, for their city has, as you are no doubt aware, been visited by one of the worst conflagrations in the history of the Dominion. The fire-smitten district in Ottawa alone extends, over an area 12½ miles by three fourths miles and what up till Thursday was a well and substantially built and thickly populated portion of Ottawa, is to day a mass of ruins. Never was a devasta tion more complete. This ruin is not con-fined to Ottawa either for fully three fifths of the city of Hull (where the fire originated) is in ruins. Hull has 3,000 more popuation than Chatham so you can form some idea of what the fire did there. A conservative estimate places the loss at fifteen mil-lion dollars and 15,000 people homeless and lion dollars and 15,000 people nometess and of these the greater portion are penniless as well. I never witnessed more heart rending scenes in my life and at the same time the sight was probably the grandest I ever saw, but the grief of those poor unfortunates was something never to be forgotten. It will take Ottawa many years to recover from the take Ottawa many years to recover from the effects of this fire and I doubt if Hull will

Disappointment in love of a pretty Wethersfield girl and the pique of a Narragansett Indian from Long Island were productive of a piece of Connecticut history which is sometimes put down as myth. The last man to prov that it was not myth died a few days ago. He was Sol Webster, male des-cendant of the Wethersfield girl, last of some three hundred others lived strange lives in the woods and hills around Barkhamsted. The pretty, white maiden, in the old Colonial days, had falled in love with a young man in Wethersfield, Conn.

but her father forbade her marrying him. Thereupon she took a vow that she would wed the first man who offered himself. About that time the Narragansett Indian, a brave named Changham, had left his tribe because of some injury to his reputation, and had come to live in Northern Connecticut. When he heard of the Wethersfield maiden, he hurried to her and offered his hand, which, according to her vow she accepted. Together they went to what is now Barkhamsted and became the progenitors of a people who during this century have been known as the "Lighthouse tribe."

It was in trying to learn how any people so far from the coast could get such a name that the romance was unearthed. The couple established their home on what is called Ragged Mountain, on the upper waters of the Tunxis, and years afterward the lights from their hut served as a landmark for the stage coaches which passed that way. Hence, it is said, the name "Lighthouse tribe."

Changham and his wife brought up eight children. The pretty but wilful Molly lived to be 105 years old, dying in 1820, at which time she was known as Granny Changham. The halfbreeds flourished at the Lighthouse, a rough and roystering colony, for generations. Their doings were many and strange, but actual crimes, such as that of the murdered Mossock. the exploits of whose halfbreed band gave the name of Satan's Kingdom to their resort, below New Hartford, were never laid at their door. Eventually they began to degenerate through marrying among them-selves and from other causes, and in their latter days were "a ,band of bleached out, basket making, root gathering vagabonds." Their cabins became fewer and more miserable, and at last the remnant of the tribe dispersed.

One hut alone remained near the village of Riverton, a mile from the original Lighthouse. It was occupied by old Sol Webster and his wife, who were, as far as known, the sole survivors of the family. Their poverty was extreme. The man said he was about eighty years old, but he looked much older. The woman is several years younger. Both were lineal descendants of Changham's daughters, but never were able to untangle their
