COFFEE, ARAB STYLE.

VERY DIFFERENT FROM THE WAY WE PREPARE IT.

A Naval Officer's Experience at a Function at the House of a Sheikh Who Had Not Been Exposed to Foreign Influences.

This account of coffee drinking as practiced by Arabs who have not been exposed to foreign influence is told by a British naval officer of high rank. The place was the town of Semail, in the extreme southeastern corner of the Arabian peninsula. Semail lies 120 miles from Muscat, the capital of Oman, and 90 miles from the sea. At the time of this visit there had been but two other Europeans in Semail in all its history.

"An Arab town," said the naval officer, "is a place where the English meaning of the word is more a collection of detached houses, each surrounded by its own grounds of from 20 to 100 acres. As my travels in Oman were conducted under the immediate protection of the sultan, and as he had provided for my special use his own particular riding camel, I was received everywhere with great respect. My reception in the house of one of the principal sheikhs of Semail took place on the second day of my visit to the town, when I paid a call upon Mohammed bin Naser of Hinnay.

"In accordance with Moslem custom, I pronounced the name of God on entering the threshold, and while being conducted to the divan by my courteous host, the salutation 'Es salaam aleikum' accompanied me. The host, a member of a company, a beautiful carpet of Persian work and a pillow covered with embroidered silk were ready for my reception. Putting off my shoes at the edge of the carpet, and after a short but ceremonious dispute with my host as to who should sit down first, I was established on the carpet, with the pillow at my back for comfortable support.

"Close to the seat of the host and a little to his left was a small raised platform of stone on which were placed the requisite utensils for preparing coffee. A small charcoal fire, urged to a white heat by means of a pair of bellows, provided the boiling water. On either side of the fire were two large jugs of some white metal as well as several smaller ones. On a shelf near the fire were several earthenware vessels. The earthenware holder for the coffee cup, and these on the shelf were of various metals, some of gold beautifully worked, some of silver, and some even of copper. The coffee was prepared in a small earthenware pot, which was held by a pair of tongs and poured into a small cup of silver or gold. The coffee was then drunk from a small cup of silver or gold. The coffee was then drunk from a small cup of silver or gold.

"The coffee maker was a black slave said to have come from the frontiers of Abyssinia. He seemed to be about 23, of slight and graceful form, with finely cut features and well molded limbs, quite black and with hair almost woolly. His costume consisted of a pair of trousers, a colored cotton shirt and a turban. He held a piece of cord tucked up on one side, and a sort of embroidered waistcoat buttoned in front but leaving arms and legs bare.

"It is not in accordance with desert etiquette to introduce for discussion any serious matter until after coffee has been served, so that the conversation consists almost entirely of general topics and the interchange of compliments. While this very small talk is going on the slave, having first let down his waist cloth so that it hangs down below his knees, passes around among the company with a small tray in his hand, a tray made of various colored grasses and about the size of a dessert plate. In the other hand he carries a cylindrical brass box from which he pours coffee berries. About the grass tray he carries a tray which is not of the right color he picks out and throws away or returns to the box. Without any ostentation he manages to call the attention of all the guests to the fact that the berries he has selected are all of the best kind.

"Then, pouring the berries from the tray into an iron ladle, he roasts them over the charcoal fire, which he blows to white heat with a pair of bellows. Coffee berries in Oman are never roasted to that dark brown or black color which is common in Europe and America, but are considered at their best when they take on a rich reddish brown color. Turning the roasted berries out to cool on the grass mat Abdullah, for that is the name of the slave, sets one of the large metal jugs on the fire to warm.

"The coffee is not ground in a machine, for that would ruin all its fine essential oil, but is pounded up in a mortar made of dark and hard basalt having a deep narrow well, into which the berries are poured. Taking the mortar between the knees, Abdullah forces the pestle into the well and down upon the roasted berries, which he slowly crushes into a fine grist of which every particle is about the size of small seed pearls or mustard seed.

"By this time the well in the large jug on the fire is nearly boiling. Filling one of the smaller jugs with the almost boiling water, he throws in the crushed coffee and allows it to boil for a short time, stirring it all the time with a stick. Then, placing on a brass tray the best zarfa and figans, the slave fills the cups with the infusion, keeping the grounds in the jug by means of a piece of dark cloth over its spout. Handing the tray to the most honored guest, he says, 'Serrmo,' which means 'Pronounce the name of God.'

"Taking the cup from the tray and looking at his host, the honored guest pronounced the great formula of Mohammedanism in the words 'Bismillah ur rahman ur rahim,' which mean 'In the name of God the compassionate and merciful.' Then the guest sips his coffee without sugar or milk, but sometimes a few aromatic seeds or ambergris may be added. If the guest is of very high rank, the host takes his own cup immediately after the guest, but under ordinary circumstances he waits until all the company has been served."

He slept.

Dean Ramsay, the witty Scottish divine of the nineteenth century, used to tell a story about one of the earls of Lauderdale. His lordship was taken very ill, the worst symptom being insomnia in an aggravated form. His little son, hearing that recovery would be impossible without sleep, said, "Send for the preacher and have him preach for father's eye sleep when that minister is in the pulpit." The doctors considered that to act in the "superstition" would be to injure the minister was immediately brought. He preached a sermon; sleep came on, and the earl recovered.

BILL OF THE PLAY.

Irrving is 42 years of age. Mark Twain's "Pudd'nhead Wilson" will be revived next season.

Rudyard Kipling has dramatized his story, "The Light That Failed."

John Oliver Hobbes (Mrs. Craigie) has completed an original comedy with the title, "The Widow of the West."

Miss Blanche Walsh is playing in "More Than Queen," the spectacular play in which Julia Arthur won success last season.

Berthold Tree has finally decided to come to this country and will bring "Herod" along as his chief attraction in the play line.

The horses in the chariot race in "Ben-Hur" in the interval they are seen by the audience run the equivalent to three-quarters of a mile.

The British play censor has refused to license a play called "Joseph of Canaan," although it was written and submitted by a clergyman.

A rumor that Harry Woodruff is to star in the English version of "L'Aiglon," succeeding Maude Adams at the end of the present season, is denied by Charles Frohman.

Marie Corelli writes to an American friend that she has so safeguarded her new novel, "The Master Christian," that its stage representation will be absolutely impossible.

There is a vacancy announced in the Forest Home for Actors, and the name of Mme. Janansek has been suggested for it. It is not known that the distinguished actress is ready to relinquish her active work upon the stage that she has honored with her art.

FWL AND THEIR FRUIT.

Use pure bred cocks always. Keep the dust bath always ready. Always plan to have the nests movable. Generally fowls that feather early and mature early are good layers and good mothers.

It is believed that the practice of discarding the hens and keeping the pullets may easily be carried too far and result in a degeneracy of the stock.

If there is any difference between the feeding of young ducks and of young chickens it is in the fact that young ducks require more bulky food than the chickens.

There is one economical result in keeping poultry on the farm that is often lost sight of. It is the large amount of waste food that the fowls pick up if given a free range.

It is hardly a good plan to depend for ventilation upon the air that is admitted by the cracks. On the contrary, better to keep the windows closed and the fowls to roost in a draft.

Corn burned on the cob and the refuse, which consists almost entirely of the grain placed before the fowls, is readily eaten by them with a marked improvement in their health.

THE DEACON.

James S. Bitter, the Methodist evangelist who hopes to build in Chicago the largest evangelistic church in the world, is 48 years old, a native of Lancaster, O., and a graduate of Wesleyan university, class of '78.

The archbishop of Canterbury has just entered on his eightieth year, having been born on St. Andrew's day, 1821, at Santa Maure, in the Ionian islands, though it is generally stated that he was born in Sierra Leone, of which his father, Major Octavius Temple, was governor.

The slim figure, kindly, intelligent face and fluttering white locks of the late Dr. Cyrus A. Bartol of Boston gave rise to the affectionate, half bantering characterization of him as a "moth eaten angel." He was also described as a "reverent radical, an acute and wayward conservative, standing aloof with his church from all ecclesiastical entanglements," and "by the flag of individual freedom in religion."

DINING CAR KITCHENS.

They Are Conducted by Rule, and All Portions Are the Same.

"The kitchen departments on railroad dining cars are run according to fixed rates," said an old Pullman conductor, "and nothing is left to chance or caprice. The cook is furnished with a manual giving explicit directions for the preparation of everything on the bill of fare, and he is held strictly accountable for any waste. He is even told how thick to cut the bread and how much butter to put on in case he is making sandwiches. Sometimes a hungry traveler, who naturally wants big portions, thinks the man in the kitchen is trying to economize on him, but he may rest assured he is getting exactly what the law allows—no more and no less."

"I remember a picture in one of the satirical papers a few years ago of a fat gentleman looking scornfully at several small sections of bread and butter. 'What do you call those?' he asks. 'Pullman sandwiches,' replies the waiter. 'Hub,' grunts the tourist, 'Mr. Pullman must cut 'em out with a conductor's punter.' We haven't got it down quite as fine as that, but we come pretty near it. The kitchens are stocked at regular intervals, and a careful calculation is made of the exact number of portions in every article furnished. At the end of the run an inspection is made, and the cook must account for everything, either in supplies or meal checks. Under that system petty pilfering is absolutely impossible. The purchasing agents who lay in the stock at important points from which travel is heavy are exceedingly important members of the company's staff."

"They can easily render the dining service over any route profitable or the reverse, and something more than mere experience and intelligence is required to make a success of the job. The men who have done the best at it seem to be guided by a sort of instinct, but as a matter of fact they are continually studying the conditions of travel. They learn what the general run of their patrons like at certain seasons of the year and compile a curious sort of table of averages that they use as a basis in purchasing perishable stock, such as meats, fruits and fresh vegetables. There is a line in the northwest that is known among the dining car men as the 'beefsteak route' on account of the extraordinary call for that particular article of diet, and I know of another that is nicknamed the 'oatmeal express' for similar reasons."

The oatmeal express carries a good many ladies and children, and the beefsteak route is a favorite highway for drummers, so, after all, the explanation is simple enough. An expert stock purchaser can command a good salary, and not long ago a man who had been stationed for some years in New York was offered a very handsome position as superintendent of the refreshment service for a big railroad in England. It had been run at a loss ever since it was installed, but within 60 days after he took hold it began to return a profit. At the same time it was greatly improved. Dining cars are a comparatively new thing abroad, and they are far behind the American, both in service and luxury."

Grotesque Soldiers.

"When the government wants soldiers," writes a Santo Domingo correspondent of the New Orleans Times-Democrat, "it simply sends out into the country districts and seizes them. At first the men are a little discontented, but when they find that they can do nothing in the army better than in their ordinary haunts, and that there is a pale, ineffective ray of glory attached to the carrying of a gun and a cartridge belt, they take a pride in their new dignity."

"Each man is furnished with one suit of clothes a year, but as time progresses he gambles away his buttons, his coat, his trousers and his hat, keeping only his gun and his belt. As the army, except on the first of the year, is always composed of soldiers in the different stages of gambling away their wardrobe, they make distinctly a picturesque display as they march through the streets on a state occasion."

"The government guarantees them four meals a day, but often forgets, in the great heat of that climate, to keep to its guarantee. The shoes furnished are supposed to be leather. In reality they are pasteboard, but as the soldiers prefer to go barefoot this makes very little difference."

Tokyo's Singing Insects.

Singing birds are esteemed in all countries, but in Japan the musical sounds emitted by certain insects are appreciated. Listening to these minute singers has been for many centuries a favorite pastime of the Japanese, and has given birth to an original commerce. At Tokyo to ward the end of May and the beginning of June one sees suspended under the verandas of houses little cages of bamboo from which break upon the silence of the fresh twilight strange little whistlings of metallic modulations and light trills which fill the air with a delicate music. It is habitually in the evening, after the hour of the bath, that the people of Tokyo seat themselves and listen to the shrill concert. The most prized of these singing insects is the surumushi. Its name means "insect bell," and the sound which it emits resembles that of a tiny silver bell. It is a tiny black beetle, with a flat body.

Legal Fees in England.

Legal etiquette in Great Britain does not allow a counsel to accept a brief for less than 1 guinea and 2s. 6d. for his clerk, although he may not possess a clerk. Should the brief be a docket, which means a case in which the counsel undertakes without the intervention of an attorney to defend the prisoner in the dock, the counsel is not allowed to accept more than a guinea, because the fact that the prisoner has not engaged an attorney implies that he cannot spare more than a guinea. Still, for all this, things are just now so bad at the bar that even these briefs are eagerly sought after.

He Was Cool.

Miss Pertie Goodwin—So you've asked papa? It wasn't such a terrible ordeal, was it? You didn't need to get excited, you know. All you had to do was to keep perfectly cool.

The Young Man—Cool? I was so cool you could have heard my teeth chatter!

A Professional Statistician.

"How did you come to be a professional beggar?" "I ain't no professional beggar. I'm employed to sit up statistics on how many heartless people there is in this town."—Chicago Record.

Tears

Many a woman has periodic crying spells. She meets her husband with eyes red and swollen and he cries out: "What has happened?" "Nothing," she replies. "I don't know what the matter with me, but I just had to have a good cry." Men don't have crying spells. It would seem therefore that an affection confined to women must have its cause in the womanly nature. There is no doubt that a diseased condition of the delicate womanly organs, is in general responsible for feminine nervousness and hysteria.

The use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription makes women happy by making them healthy. There are no more crying spells. "Favorite Prescription" cures inflammation, ulceration and female weakness. It makes weak women strong, sick women well.

There is no medicine "just as good." Accept no substitute.

"For three years," writes Mrs. Mary A. Sasser, of High Lamar Co., Texas, "I suffered with falling of the womb, also ulceration of the womb. After using three bottles of your 'Favorite Prescription,' four of 'Golden Medical Discovery' and two of 'Pleasant Pellets,' I found relief. I am able to do my work with ease. I recommend your wonderful medicine to all my friends. I truly believe it saved my life."

Medical Adviser, in paper covers, is sent free on receipt of 31 one-cent stamps, to pay cost of customs and mailing only. Cloth binding 50 stamps. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

TALES OF CITIES.

There are 150 square miles of streets in London. Each square mile averages 120 streets and each street 100 houses.

Twenty years ago the city of Toronto began the erection of a city hall which was to cost $300,000 by the original estimate. The outlay on it to date has been $2,345,000, and it is not yet finished.

New York city still retains an occasional landmark. At present the public building in New York is St. Paul's chapel, at the corner of Broadway and Fulton street. It was built in 1703, ten years before the Declaration of Independence.

NAVAL NOTES.

The French torpedo boat Audaceux is the smallest ironclad in the world. She carries an armor belt over her machinery an inch or so in thickness, proof probably against anything smaller than a 6 pound projectile.

New buildings at Annapolis are progressing as rapidly as the material can be supplied, and it is safe to say that before another winter the plans of the architect will begin to develop on the lines which have been approved by the navy department. The new armory will be one of the notable buildings in the country.

OUR REPRESENTATIVES.

If the demands for a house of 400 members are granted now, a bad precedent will be strengthened, and after the next census the pressure will be for an increase to 450 members.—Chicago Times-Herald.

The objections to increasing the size of the house of representatives are many, and they should have full consideration. But these objections are neither so numerous nor so important as to outweigh an equitable distribution of representation and political power among the states.

THE NURSERY.

Bedclothes fasteners are a necessity with little children who are apt to catch cold from their restlessness at night. Clips to hold the coverings over them are now made and are said to answer their purpose perfectly.

Baby's mouth should be washed every morning with tepid water in which a pinch of borax is dissolved. This simple lotion keeps the mouth fresh and sweet and prevents the uncomfortable affliction, a sore-mouth, with which so many babies are troubled.
