NEVER PLANNED TO KILL

Knew Nothing of Plot to Murder Bell and Others.

Denies Given Steve Adams Money, But Sent $30 Relief Money to Mrs. Adams—Witness Explains His Letter to Mrs. Orchard—Draft to Jack Simpkins Was For Legitimate Expenses—Haywood Tells of Arrest.

Boise, Idaho, July 13.—The cross-examination of William D. Haywood in the Steenberg murder trial was concluded yesterday. Clarence Darow at once commenced the re-direct examination, which was concluded at 3:35 p.m. The defence will close its case to-day after the examination of one more witness.

When Haywood's examination was continued at the opening of court yesterday, he said that Orchard had been at his house three or four times. Most of the members of the union called on him when they were in Denver, he said. He never called on Orchard and never had anything to do with buying the money for Orchard to "go out on a killing expedition with." He denied positively that he had talked with Orchard or planned with him the killing of Sherman Bell, Gos. Peabody, Jas. Hoan, David Moffitt or Judges Goddard and Gabbert.

Haywood first met Steve Adams in 1902. He said the $25 he sent to Adams at Ogden when the latter wired he was in jail there was his (Haywood's) own money. Adams had been out prospecting and had stated on leaving Denver that if he struck any thing he would locate Haywood on it.

Haywood never gave Adams any more money, but in 1905, in answer to an appeal for temporary relief from Mrs. Adams, he sent them $30. They had located in a homestead in Oregon and promised to pay back the loan in butter and eggs. The next he heard of Steve Adams was when the latter was arrested. The letter he wrote to Mrs. Orchard was in reply to one asking her husband's whereabouts. Haywood declared he knew absolutely nothing of the plot against Gov. Steenberg.

"I don't know that I had thought of him after I left the State of Idaho." The first Haywood heard of the assassination was in the papers, which claimed that the crime was a culmination of the troubles in the Coeur d'Alene. The papers also reported that a union card had been found in the effects of Thomas Hogan, who had been arrested on suspicion.

At miners' headquarters there was considerable question as to who Hogan was, the consensus of opinion being that it was Orchard, who had used that name in leaving Cripple Creek to seek employment elsewhere.

The first definite information came in the cipher telegram from Simpkins, which was translated at first as "Can I get counsel for Hogan?" But which was afterwards corrected to read: "Cannot get counsel for Hogan."

Haywood's explanation of sending the $100 draft to Jack Simpkins on Dec. 31, 1905, was as follows: "Simpkins came to Denver early in December to attend a meeting of the executive board. He drew $231.50 expenses while there. Cashing a cheque for this, he gave Haywood $100 and asked him to forward it to Spokane sometime before Christmas. Simpkins said he was going on a trip, and did not want to take all the money with him."

"When the matter of employing counsel for Orchard and to look after the interests of the organization first came up, Haywood said he and Meyer consulted with General Counsel Murphy, who advised going very slowly in the matter. After considering the subject for a day or two, Murphy advised the employment of Mr. Nugent."

Haywood said the first he knew of any intimation to arrest him was when he was taken into custody. He related the story of his arrest, the denial of a right to consult counsel, and the trip to Boise on a special train in charge of Gen. Bulkeley Wells, a member of the Mine Owners' Association.

On cross-examination Haywood said, in answer to questions that the time of the Coeur d'Alene troubles the Western Federation of Miners came to think of Governor Steenberg as a pronounced opponent of organized labor. Prior to this trouble he was regarded as a friend, and was at one time an honorary member of a local union.

It simply confirms what had already been made clear by Ambassador Aoki, the thoroughly good understanding between the two Governments, and the fundamental friendliness between the two nations."

ORANGEMEN ON TOP.

Police Force Inadequate to Keep Cars Running on Parade Route.

Toronto, July 13.—Yesterday goes down in the Orange annals of this city as "the greatest day." Flags floated from all the schools and public buildings, and the fife and drums bands played from early morning till late at night. Nearly 100,000 people witnessed the parade, which contained about 4,000 Orangemen. The procession was two and a quarter miles long and took an hour to pass a given point. The procession was headed by police in an automobile and practically the entire city force was on duty. Preparation had been made to quell any trouble, and trouble was anticipated. Heretofore the custom has been for the Orangemen to "own the city." The car service has always been stopped and nothing allowed to interrupt the procession. A few days ago Manager E. J. Fleming of the Street Railway issued a letter of instruction to motormen and conductors that cars must run on time and that the procession would not be allowed to block the service. The parade had only got fairly started when trouble began. At several places, the cars were placed on the tracks, car windows smashed and motormen threatened. One man with a strange idea of the best way to stop the cars used a child for the purpose. It was only a year-old baby, but each time the motorman started his car he would make a motion as though he was going to throw the child on the tracks. Then the car would stop.

The police were forced at some points to use their batons to prevent serious trouble. Both women and children took part in the efforts to block the cars. About noon the company discontinued the service until the procession had passed, as the police seemed unable to render the necessary protection to keep the cars going. Geo. Pickering was arrested and a number of summonses may be issued.

The day was observed with enthusiasm throughout the Dominion generally. In Montreal and the Quebec centres there were no demonstrations.

Save something so you can lay up yourself on a rainy day.

Ten-dollar hospitality on a one-dollar man is eleven dollars wasted.

MASCULINE VANITY.

Do You Think Men Are as Vain as Women?

It has been said that the vanity of woman begins at the soles of her shoes and ends in the crown of her hat.

Of course it was a man who said it and another man who repeated it to another man, who wrote it in a letter to another man, who told it to his wife, who told it to a feminine relative, who told it to one as a special secret. And yet they say that women have the monopoly of vanity and gossip!

Do not believe them, ladies. There is as much vanity walking about the world in coat and trousers as there is in a bodice and skirt.

You think that a man never looks in a mirror?

You should peep into the gentlemen's cloakroom just before the opening of a large function. You see them, one after the other, old and young, ugly and well favored, slide up to the mirrors and tug at their butterfly ties, smoothing out their shirt fronts and tenderly replacing the few stray hairs which have turned aside from the level road of the parting. Note how carefully that baldheaded old man rakes a small pomatized curl over the shiny surface of his venerable pate and twists up a pair of dyed mustaches.

It must be admitted that vanity in matters of dress and toilet is to a certain extent part of the duty of woman. Her self respect is far more involved in her personal appearance than is that of man, for well she knows that a woman is judged by externals, while a man stands to rise or fall rather by what he hides within than by what he shows outside.

But, though man has fallen to sorry drabs and grays and black and white, his vanity of appearance is not yet dead. The tailor still has to know his business better than the dressmaker, and if a woman wishes to be particularly well and expensively clothed she must go to a man's tailor who makes women dressing a side show in his business.

The younger a man is the more he thinks he knows about women.

Nothing is impossible to the man who can will.
