Not Till I Have Won.
Place not the barrel on my head
Now, when the race is just begun;
By some direct, and well-timed
Till I the prize have won.
A kindly word my heart might cheer,
And help me to complete my task,
Yet if bestowed they should cheer
Till I am done, I ask.
Think how I would be mortified,
And how with grief my soul be tossed
If I should find me should decide
That the prize had been lost.
Your wishes are no doubt sincere,
And for my good are surely meant;
Yet if bestowed they should cheer,
I beg, make use o'er content.
And how I would be mortified,
And how with grief my soul be tossed
If I should find me should decide
That the prize had been lost.
So friend, please bettering words restrain
Till I have won, and then I'll cheer,
And when the prize I seek I gain,
On me their worth bestow.

What Maritime Provinces Have to Offer Home-seekers.
The Canadian Government has issued a warning against indiscriminate immigration. For several years a crusade has been carried on in Europe urging upon all and sundry the advantages offered by Canada to its new settlers. The result was an immigration including all classes and conditions. Among them were the untrained, the idle, the indolent, expecting to find a land, if not bettering with wealth and luxury, at least affording an easy living. Many were disappointed. There was work in plenty but the immigrant and the work were not adapted to each other. The farms were calling for help but the majority of immigrants preferred city life and they stayed in the cities. Today they are idle and complaining that Canada is a poor place for the immigrant.
There is room yet in Canada for many millions more. The West is still calling for men to till the soil, to break new land; calling for women to share in the pioneering processes which will eventually convert the great western wilderness into a land of bounded harvests. In the United Kingdom desirous of taking up farm lands in a settled country could find no better opportunity than in the Maritime Provinces. There are three classes of immigrants to whom Eastern Canada holds out welcoming hands and assurance of remunerative work, namely:
Farmers with a limited capital to purchase farms already cultivated, a 'going concern' in a desirable environment, a soil of infinite possibilities, a genial climate, an assured market and all the comfort that civilization has to offer in return for honest work.
Farm laborers willing to work for a reasonable wage, with comfortable housing, plenty of good wholesome food and an opportunity to purchase farms of their own.
Domestic servants, trustworthy and willing to work in comfortable homes in country or city, at liberal wages. There is, perhaps, no class of employees so much in demand at present as domestic servants, and no class as liberally paid.—Bury Eut.

Death's Harvest.
The following from the Victoria County, N. B. News, will be read with interest by Wolfville people. The deceased was the father of Mrs. Henshaw of this town:
RAINFORD W. LOVELLY.
In the death of Rainford W. Lovelly on Sunday evening, Oct. 4th, at his home, Perth, loses another of its old and respected landmarks.
Mr. Lovelly has been gradually failing for the past year, but few people knew that the end was so near. He had, however, gone past the three score and ten mark, having just his 75th birthday. He was not only a native of Perth, but has always lived on the homestead where he was born, a beautiful spot which he dearly loved. Mr. Lovelly has always taken a very active interest in everything that tended to build up the country. Development of the country from its infancy, from stage coach and tow boat and steamboat, as well as the old-fashioned dug out canoe from Fredericton to Perth as a means of transit, was inspiring to him in his day, but finally came the railway, (narrow gauge) and then standard gauge, bicycle, telephone and automobile, together with the building of the Town of Perth, and the general improvement of the whole country on a vast scale, with the individual energy he himself was able to put into these great developments, made life to him one grand, moving picture, well worth living to enjoy. And to say that he did enjoy life is only putting it mildly, and even at his advanced age, all who knew Rainford Lovelly will learn of his demise with sorrow. It will be remembered that Perth in the past was noted for its singing. No corner in all the Province of New Brunswick could render such beautiful singing as Perth, and under the leadership of the late Barnabas Armstrong, Sr., Mr. Lovelly, from his singing school days up to within a few months ago could always be found among the good singers, as it was his. He was a most devoted husband and father, and a man who took great pride in his home. Perth will miss him.
His father was Daniel Lovelly who died when Rainford was a small boy. His mother, who was Phoebe Larlee, married again her second husband being the late Abraham Topham. They moved to Perth, Michigan, in the early 60's, where, a little later they both died.
His only sister was Mrs. Samuel Gaudy, who on one time lived in Caribou, Me., finally in 1876, moved to Perth, Minn., where she died in 1884. Mrs. Hilda Craig, a half sister, died last spring and beside her he leaves two half brothers and a half sister, Mr. Joseph A. Topham, of Staples, Minn., Mr. Bernard G. Topham, of East Saginaw, Mich., and Mrs. Annie Coggins, of Flint, Mich.
Besides a sorrowing wife, daughter of the late Stillman Armstrong, he leaves three daughters and six grand children, Mrs. Captain H. A. Henshaw, of Wolfville, N. S., and her two sons, Vaughn and Elden, attending college, Mrs. John H. Weaver, of Bassano, Alberta, and her four children, and Mrs. A. G. Gaster, who is at home with her mother.
The funeral was held from his residence on Wednesday, the 7th, and was one of the largest seen in Perth for many years, probably not since the funeral of his son, Herbert, in 1901, who was brought home from Washington. The sermon was preached by Rev. W. M. Fields, from text of his own selection, from St. John 14:1, 2, 3. Mr. Lovelly was happy in the thought of meeting his friends and loved ones on the other shore.
The interment took place in his lot in Larlee Creek Cemetery.

Bright, Healthy, Attractive Girls.
THIS CONDITION CAN ONLY BE MAINTAINED THROUGH RICH, RED BLOOD.
It makes all the difference in the world to a girl whether she develops into a bright, healthy, attractive woman or sinks into a sickly, unhappy, suffering semi-invalid.
The girl whose blood is poor and scanty—who is anaemic as the doctor terms it—starts life under too great a handicap. She is weaker and more frail than her companions who have rich, red blood. She is more easily fatigued in body and mind, and work of any kind exhausts her. In time her health breaks down. She becomes pale, looks worn out, is languid, irritable and nervous. Her heart palpitates violently at the least exertion, and she falls behind other girls in looks, health and a capacity for enjoying life. Abundant rich, red blood is the one thing that can restore good health to the many thousands of such girls. The rich, red blood can only be obtained through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They have given thousands of weak, white-faced, bloodless girls, robust, vigorous health and high spirits. Here is a bit of proof. Miss Olive Gauvreau, St. Jerome, Que., says: 'I have reason to be more than grateful to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, for they restored me to health after more than one doctor and many medicines had failed. I suffered as so many girls do from anaemia. I was all run down, tortured with headaches, could not stand any exertion, and had no appetite, though of course I had to force myself to eat. I was in this condition for nearly two years, and although doctoring continually, seemed to be steadily growing worse, and I was very much discouraged and despondent. Finally a friend urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I discontinued all the other medicines and did so. In the course of a few weeks there was no room to doubt that I had at last found the right medicine. My appetite returned, the headaches began to come less frequently, the color was returning to my face. The continued use of the pills for a little longer fully restored my health, and I have since been as healthy and active as anyone could wish. I cannot too strongly recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to other weak and ailing girls.'
You can get these Pills through your medicine dealer or by mail post paid at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $5.00 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

What the Polar Explorer Eats and Drinks.
Sir Edward Shackleton, the antarctic explorer, who is leading another expedition to the south pole, gave an interview to a newspaper correspondent before he left London. He spoke, among other things, of the value of sugar as food to travellers in that region. The craving for it is very strong, he declared, and then he added:
To show you how valuable sugar is to the explorer, there was an occasion when we marched for miles, drawing heavy sledges in fourteen days and a half. Every two hours we each took two or three lumps of sugar. Within ten minutes of eating them, we could feel the heat going through our bodies. The highest temperature of that march was sixty two degrees below zero.
We shall take with us no stimulants except tea and cocoa. We drink the tea at midday to refresh us for the afternoon march. The cocoa is taken the last thing at night to preserve bodily heat during the hours of sleep. The greatest temptation that assails an arctic explorer is the desire to drink on the march. At his feet there is potential liquid in unlimited quantity. But the snow is at forty degrees below zero, and must be melted in the mouth. The heat required to melt it is much too precious to be used in that way; it is needed to keep up the bodily heat and energy.
Catching cold is almost unknown in polar regions. The only time we ever suffered from cold was just after we had opened a bale of English clothes to serve them out for winter wear. The germs, apparently, were lying dormant among the clothing. They 'woke up' on being heated. The men whose duties took them into the open recovered in a day. The others suffered for four or five days.

An Atrocious Suggestion Quashed.
The preposterous suggestion to arm the school boys of New York City with rifles and provide for their military training was promptly and uncompromisingly opposed by Mr. Thomas W. Churchill, president of the Board of Education, and Dr. William H. Maxwell, superintendent of the city schools. President Churchill declared that he would oppose any system of military practice in the schools that would give the boys wrong ideas about human life and give them an incentive to shoot. Dr. Maxwell is reported to have made the following vigorous statement:
The law prohibits a reasoning man from keeping for his own protection arms in his home, and yet this scheme proposes to put into the hands of unreasoning school children army rifles, and to store them in the public schools. It is preposterous.
No occasion should be neglected to impress upon our children the horrors of war—not merely the immediate horrors of the battlefields, but the collateral horrors that follow in the wake of war—the orphaning of tender children, the widowhood of loving wives, old age deprived of its natural support, the flower of a country cut off in its youth, the poverty, the disease, the unpeppable anguish of mind and body. And all this to the end that our children, to whom in years to come may be committed the issues of peace or war for a beloved country, may learn that war is, so dreadful a thing that it should never be entered upon lightly, but only as a last resort in defense against national peril or in support of some fundamental principle of transcendent value to humanity, as, for instance, the abolition of slavery with its horrors worse than war.
A great German writer declared that when the boys of a country were found playing war as a favorite game the nation was on the verge of war. The whole theory of extensive armament as a preventative of war has been shattered by the spectacle of blood-drenched Europe.
'Seek peace, and pursue it.' That is far better. Think peace, talk peace, hope peace, pray for peace. Tell our boys that bravery and victory on one side of the battlefield means inevitably that those on the other side of the field are wounded and slain. Impress upon them what is happening where the bullet stops rather than the courage of the man who starts it on its way. There are other and better ways than battle for developing and demonstrating courage. The whole country will endorse the bold statement by the leaders of public education in the metropolis against arming and militarizing the boys of the public schools.

The Right to be Bitter.
I've a right to be bitter if I want to. A man dying of tuberculosis was speaking. 'My life has been one long mockery of hardship and failure. I've never known a year's perfect health, and all around me I see men who can squander their inheritance of health with impunity. It's been a grim struggle to get enough money to keep soul and body together, and everywhere I see those who have more money than they need or than is good for them. Now, in early morning, I am dying. If I am bitter, I think I've a right to be!'
Doctor Brown nodded sympathetically. 'It isn't your right in the matter that I am concerned about,' he said, very quietly, 'just why God has allowed your lot to be so heavy, when mine has been comparatively so light, I don't know; but I am sure that sometime we are both going to understand, and see that all the time he was doing what was best. I suppose the eternity so long will be so short and so unthen that it will mean more to us than ten thousand considerations now hidden from us that we shall then see, will make it all appear very different. Some day we shall see conclusively that divine love was all about our suffering here. I am sure of that!'
'But just now, I am greatly concerned over the needlessness of your voluntarily adding another burden to the others. I wish I could make you see that bitterness only adds another burden to your lot. You don't even get the poor satisfaction of avenging yourself on the world or on anyone. You are the one it stings. It only takes from you every possibility of entering into any of the positive joys that, in spite of their suffering, the saints of all ages have known. Circumstances have made your life terribly hard, my dear friend; I beg you not to add a hardship greater than the others of your lot!'
It was a changed man who grasped Doctor Brown's hand a day later. In his eyes was new peace. 'The bitterness is gone,' he said. 'I've let the heaviest burden I ever had to bear.'

Canada's Opportunity.
The prosperity of the whole country is closely connected with the uninterrupted turning of factory wheels, so much so that widespread closing of manufacturing concerns would produce a condition bordering on panic.
The manufacturers are doing all in their power to overcome obstacles. They put forth every effort to keep factories open even if they are in some instances obliged to reduce the staff. As a result the panic is passing.
Now is the time for the people to help. A sentiment in favor of 'Canadian made' goods will be one of the greatest sources of strength to the home market.
At this crisis, our people should realize that every dollar sent out of Canada for an article made at home retards the progress and prosperity of Canada.
The present struggle is desperate, but cool-headed courage and loyalty will win, if we continue the present tendency to substitute Canadian-made articles for those formerly imported.
In an address before the Manufacturers' Association recently, Mr. R. C. Wilkins, President of the Eastern Townships Association Boards of Trade, voiced this sentiment in the following stirring words:
'The only manufacturing industry now working full time in Germany is the Establishment for the Manufacture of Widows and Orphans of which the German Kaiser is the President and Managing Director. Let us be awake to our opportunities and obtain our share of the prosperity that is bound to come to Canada, once this German-made, cold blooded, diabolical plot against humanity and civilization has received its quietus at the hands of the allies. The soil fertilized by British blood spilled on the fields of battle produces the greatest crop of liberty and justice known to man.'

Why Perfidious?
Whatever her enemies may say of England's policy, it is difficult to understand how any man of sense can call it perfidious in the present instance. Surely she has made no bones about her hostility to Germany. That Germans should resent it is only human nature. But there is a strange incongruity in the epithets they apply to it. On the one hand, they point out how England has for years joined with the other powers in thwarting German attempts at expansion in Morocco and elsewhere. On the other hand, they profess to be amazed at finding her still in the same attitude. In one sentence they recall the abuse and the jingo desire for the destruction of the mercantile marine. In the next they reproach England for perfidy in doing what they claim she had long intended to do.—New York Globe.

Consumption Takes Hundreds of People
Hundreds of people succumb to consumption every day.
Science proves that the germs only thrive when the system is weakened from colds or sickness, overwork, confining duties or when general weakness exists.
The best physicians point out that during changing seasons the blood should be made rich and pure and active by taking Scott's Emulsion after meals. The cod liver oil in Scott's Emulsion warms the body by enriching the blood; it peculiarly strengthens the lungs and throat, while it upholds the restorative forces of the body to avoid colds and prevent consumption.
If you work indoors, the easily feel languid or nervous, Scott's Emulsion is the most strengthening food—most everyone knows. It is totally free from stupefying drugs. Avoid substitutes.

Canada's Opportunity.
'Industrial Canada,' published by the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, has a number of helpful ideas calculated to better conditions provided the people co-operate with the manufacturers. In making efforts to restore confidence the magazine truly points out that in putting forth such efforts the manufacturers are acting in the public interests as well as their own.
The prosperity of the whole country is closely connected with the uninterrupted turning of factory wheels, so much so that widespread closing of manufacturing concerns would produce a condition bordering on panic.
The manufacturers are doing all in their power to overcome obstacles. They put forth every effort to keep factories open even if they are in some instances obliged to reduce the staff. As a result the panic is passing.

How the Bees Fought for Belgium.
Another story of the war that rivals the ancient tale of the Roman general whose hissing warred the Sacred City and who, in the end, reaches me from Belgium. A small fort formed a highly important strategic point of the Belgian army and the country near was closely watched, for the fort was safe so long as the Belgians could prevent the enemy from placing any big guns on the neighboring hills. Under cover of the dark, however, a pushful Bavarian battery climbed laboriously to a little knoll from whence it would be easy to drop shells into the forts. But what the Belgians had left the bees still guarded, and the foremost soldier leading his male for the sake of quiet, over turned a hive. Immediately the darkness seemed alive with red-hot needles, and the joy of the aspirations of the bees did not increase when the male, outraged by the little cessant, that clung to its soft and sensitive nose, heighed. The weight of a frightened error is wind enough, but a male's expression of terror is a blood-curdling sound, and the darkness, the buzzing, and the intolerable pain shattered the nerves of the handful of men in front. They turned and, stumbling over their comrades, the whole wild melee went thundering back down the hill, a pandemonium of man and beast; clanking chains, the eldritch neighing of the mules and a stream of guttural South German profanity intermingled in the wild melody. There was a clatter of rifle fire from the fort and a little party of Belgians came for the hill on a run but the bees were too angry to distinguish friend from enemy, and were left in undisturbed possession until the morning, when the Belgians came and threw up a asafetring of trenches.

The Lights of London.
Although the street lights of London are now lowered by night, London dwellings continue to be more efficiently lit than they were in early Victorian days. Edmund Yates, who was born in 1831, relates that in his boyhood 'there was gas in the streets and shops, and wax candles for the great ones of the earth; but those who could not afford such luxuries were compelled to seek their illumination in tallow candles which required snuffing—i. e., the removal of their burnt wicks—about every quarter of an hour. For a night light we used a long 'larding' rushlight set up in the middle of a huge tin light-house perforated with round holes, the reflection of which on the walls and ceiling was ghastly in the extreme.
'Is the water you get at your board (or house) pure?'
'No, we frequently find traces of coffee and other substances in it.'

Not Till I Have Won.
Place not the barrel on my head
Now, when the race is just begun;
By some direct, and well-timed
Till I the prize have won.
A kindly word my heart might cheer,
And help me to complete my task,
Yet if bestowed they should cheer
Till I am done, I ask.
Think how I would be mortified,
And how with grief my soul be tossed
If I should find me should decide
That the prize had been lost.
Your wishes are no doubt sincere,
And for my good are surely meant;
Yet if bestowed they should cheer,
I beg, make use o'er content.
And how I would be mortified,
And how with grief my soul be tossed
If I should find me should decide
That the prize had been lost.
So friend, please bettering words restrain
Till I have won, and then I'll cheer,
And when the prize I seek I gain,
On me their worth bestow.

Although the street lights of London are now lowered by night, London dwellings continue to be more efficiently lit than they were in early Victorian days. Edmund Yates, who was born in 1831, relates that in his boyhood 'there was gas in the streets and shops, and wax candles for the great ones of the earth; but those who could not afford such luxuries were compelled to seek their illumination in tallow candles which required snuffing—i. e., the removal of their burnt wicks—about every quarter of an hour. For a night light we used a long 'larding' rushlight set up in the middle of a huge tin light-house perforated with round holes, the reflection of which on the walls and ceiling was ghastly in the extreme.
'Is the water you get at your board (or house) pure?'
'No, we frequently find traces of coffee and other substances in it.'

The Right to be Bitter.
I've a right to be bitter if I want to. A man dying of tuberculosis was speaking. 'My life has been one long mockery of hardship and failure. I've never known a year's perfect health, and all around me I see men who can squander their inheritance of health with impunity. It's been a grim struggle to get enough money to keep soul and body together, and everywhere I see those who have more money than they need or than is good for them. Now, in early morning, I am dying. If I am bitter, I think I've a right to be!'
Doctor Brown nodded sympathetically. 'It isn't your right in the matter that I am concerned about,' he said, very quietly, 'just why God has allowed your lot to be so heavy, when mine has been comparatively so light, I don't know; but I am sure that sometime we are both going to understand, and see that all the time he was doing what was best. I suppose the eternity so long will be so short and so unthen that it will mean more to us than ten thousand considerations now hidden from us that we shall then see, will make it all appear very different. Some day we shall see conclusively that divine love was all about our suffering here. I am sure of that!'
'But just now, I am greatly concerned over the needlessness of your voluntarily adding another burden to the others. I wish I could make you see that bitterness only adds another burden to your lot. You don't even get the poor satisfaction of avenging yourself on the world or on anyone. You are the one it stings. It only takes from you every possibility of entering into any of the positive joys that, in spite of their suffering, the saints of all ages have known. Circumstances have made your life terribly hard, my dear friend; I beg you not to add a hardship greater than the others of your lot!'
It was a changed man who grasped Doctor Brown's hand a day later. In his eyes was new peace. 'The bitterness is gone,' he said. 'I've let the heaviest burden I ever had to bear.'

Canada's Opportunity.
The prosperity of the whole country is closely connected with the uninterrupted turning of factory wheels, so much so that widespread closing of manufacturing concerns would produce a condition bordering on panic.
The manufacturers are doing all in their power to overcome obstacles. They put forth every effort to keep factories open even if they are in some instances obliged to reduce the staff. As a result the panic is passing.
Now is the time for the people to help. A sentiment in favor of 'Canadian made' goods will be one of the greatest sources of strength to the home market.
At this crisis, our people should realize that every dollar sent out of Canada for an article made at home retards the progress and prosperity of Canada.
The present struggle is desperate, but cool-headed courage and loyalty will win, if we continue the present tendency to substitute Canadian-made articles for those formerly imported.
In an address before the Manufacturers' Association recently, Mr. R. C. Wilkins, President of the Eastern Townships Association Boards of Trade, voiced this sentiment in the following stirring words:
'The only manufacturing industry now working full time in Germany is the Establishment for the Manufacture of Widows and Orphans of which the German Kaiser is the President and Managing Director. Let us be awake to our opportunities and obtain our share of the prosperity that is bound to come to Canada, once this German-made, cold blooded, diabolical plot against humanity and civilization has received its quietus at the hands of the allies. The soil fertilized by British blood spilled on the fields of battle produces the greatest crop of liberty and justice known to man.'

Why Perfidious?
Whatever her enemies may say of England's policy, it is difficult to understand how any man of sense can call it perfidious in the present instance. Surely she has made no bones about her hostility to Germany. That Germans should resent it is only human nature. But there is a strange incongruity in the epithets they apply to it. On the one hand, they point out how England has for years joined with the other powers in thwarting German attempts at expansion in Morocco and elsewhere. On the other hand, they profess to be amazed at finding her still in the same attitude. In one sentence they recall the abuse and the jingo desire for the destruction of the mercantile marine. In the next they reproach England for perfidy in doing what they claim she had long intended to do.—New York Globe.

Consumption Takes Hundreds of People
Hundreds of people succumb to consumption every day.
Science proves that the germs only thrive when the system is weakened from colds or sickness, overwork, confining duties or when general weakness exists.
The best physicians point out that during changing seasons the blood should be made rich and pure and active by taking Scott's Emulsion after meals. The cod liver oil in Scott's Emulsion warms the body by enriching the blood; it peculiarly strengthens the lungs and throat, while it upholds the restorative forces of the body to avoid colds and prevent consumption.
If you work indoors, the easily feel languid or nervous, Scott's Emulsion is the most strengthening food—most everyone knows. It is totally free from stupefying drugs. Avoid substitutes.

Canada's Opportunity.
'Industrial Canada,' published by the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, has a number of helpful ideas calculated to better conditions provided the people co-operate with the manufacturers. In making efforts to restore confidence the magazine truly points out that in putting forth such efforts the manufacturers are acting in the public interests as well as their own.
