

The Boy About the Place.

When you take a stroll... Like a minister's opinion... With some words so strange that, surely...

MOODYNE

THE CONVICT SHIP.

BY JOHN BUTLER O'REILLY.

CHAPTER XVII.—(CONTINUED).

'Captain Draper,' said Mr. Wyville, in an official tone, 'you are relieved of your command. The ship goes out to commission.'

'I shall have quarters on the ship,' said Draper with an alarmed look. 'No, sir,' said Mr. Wyville shortly. 'You must seek some other means of transport.'

The Valley of the Vasse.

I.

ALICE WALMSLEY'S NEW HOME. The little town of Freemantle, with its imposing citadel, the great stone prison, is built on the shore, within the angle formed by the Vasse River as it flows calmly into the calm sea.

Mr. Wyville is a man whose whole life seems given to "making others" miserable. He is a man of a certain type, a man who is not content with his own lot, but who seeks to improve the lot of others.

What do you mean, you miserable wretch?

'What do you mean, you miserable wretch?' said Alice, looking at Draper with a look of scorn. 'You are a man who is not content with your own lot, but who seeks to improve the lot of others.'
