SATURDAY'S RACE.

SANDY HOOK, July 17.

At one fifteen, the committee hoisted signals for a triangular course, the first leg of which was south east; second west by south; third north by east half east.

The signal was shown at one thirty for a start at one forty.

Resolute crossed the starting line at one forty five and Shamrock one forty six, five, unofficial time.

Range finders on board the destroyer Goldsboro, official press boat, places Shamrock's lead at four hundred yards at two thirty five.

Official starting time of Resolute one, forty six, twenty three, Shamrock one, forty six, thirty seven.

At three o'clock the Resolute was half a mile to windward of Shamrock, and less than half that distance astern. Wind has increased to five knots and it looks now like completed race, but with late finish. At three ten wind increased to six knots.

Range finders on Goldsboro showed Resolute four hundred yards ahead to windward at three fifty.

There is a possibility that the race will not be completed in the time limit on account of light winds.

At five fifteen Shamrock was five miles astern. After turning first mark to win, Resolute will have to finish approximately fifteen miles, in two and half hours.

Shamrock coming up fast at five forty five, and less than two miles astern. Race declared off.

NO ROOM FOR HIM.

LONDON, July 18. Sante Ri Nuorteva, who recently arrived in England as an emissary of C. K. Martens, Russian Bolshevik representative in the United States, has been ordered deported, according to the Evening Standard and is now en route to Russia.

MURDERED IN HIS CLUB.

BEELFAST, July 18. Commissioner Smythe of the Royal Irish Constabulary was shot dead in the county club at Cork last night, by fourteen armed men, who forced their way past the doorman, Smythe was found by the intruders sitting, with friends, one of them being District Inspector Craig. Several of the men fired point blank at Commissioner Smythe, who rose, but fell dead while endeavoring to reach the door. Craig was wounded during the fusillade. Smythe was Divisional Commissioner for the Munster Royal Irish Constabulary, and his name had figured prominently in the House of Commons during the past week in connection with a speech he made to the police at Listowel, County Kerry, in which it was declared he ordered his men not to be afraid to shoot with effect. He had just returned to Ireland, from London, where he gave the Irish office an explanation of affairs in Ireland.

INTERFERING WITH MAILS.

BEELFAST, July 18.

One of the most significant holdups of a mail train occurred after Friday, midnight, when a hundred men stopped and ransacked, at Donaghmore, a mail train running from Dublin and Belfast to Londonderry. The trainmen were lined up on the right of way and covered with pistols, while the mails were rifled. While these holdups are being common in the South of Ireland, they are less frequent in the North where the loyalist population appears more interested in assisting the military and police in arresting the perpetrators of hold-ups.

SUCCESSFUL FLIGHT.

QUEBEC, July 18.

A brief bulletin received here tonight from Roberval, Lake St. John, stated that the two Hydro-Airplanes which left Halifax on Saturday morning had arrived at Lake St. John at five o'clock this afternoon.

ANGLO-JAP ALLIANCE.

HONOLULU, July 18.

Great Britain and Japan have decided to renew the Alliance between the two Nations, according to an announcement from the Foreign Office in Tokyo, which has been received here. The Foreign Office declared that press reports from London last Tuesday night that the standing convention had been automatically renewed, for one year, were misleading. For this reason, general revisions of the treaty have been arranged, and changes as to particulars will be made later, the announcement is quoted as saying.

FAMOUS INN DESTROYED.

LAKE PLACID, N.Y., July 18. Fire completely destroyed Lake Placid Inn yesterday, and only two or three guests managed to save any clothing.

STREET FIGHTING CASUALTIES.

CORK, July 19.

Most of the casualties in last night's street fighting, brought on by the killing of John Burke, at Belfast, occurred in the north end of the city.

PAID BIG PRICE.

BERLIN, July 19.

"We saved the Ruhr from invasion, but we paid a big price for it," is the way Dr. Walter Simons, Minister of Foreign Affairs, epitomized the result of the meeting at Spa last week, between Germans and Allies, according to a News Agency report.

UPON THE ROOF.

NEW YORK, July 19.

An airplane landing stage will be constructed on the roof of the Hotel Astor, it is announced here.

The Kodak Store.

The new store of Mr. Anthony Tooton, 309 Water Street, opposite his old stand, was the centre of attraction to the hundreds of people who passed there on Saturday night. The store with its diffused lighting, new stock, white ceilings and walls, presented a very pretty appearance. Mr. Tooton is the possessor of one of the most up-to-date photographic establishments in the city. He has recently arrived from the States and Canada, and while there procured the most up to the minute ideas in the photographic line. He has installed a new system for developing films, and also a modern drying device, the only one of its kind in Newfoundland. Both these devices are operated by electricity. Mr. Tooton, who has been in the country for the past eighteen years, has made hosts of friends, and we bespeak for him in his new establishment a liberal share of the public patronage which his courteousness and progressiveness deserves.

A War Time Ship and Captain.

S.S. Wabana, Captain Reside, which arrived in port Saturday for repairs, will go on dock after the Hartfield comes off. The Wabana at the commencement of the war, was commandeered by the Govt. and served through the Dardanelles campaign, carrying coals to the fleet, afterward doing service from Chatham and Portsmouth to Dunkirk. Capt. Reside, M.B.E., for his valuable services rendered in this connection, was decorated by His Majesty the King.

Treasures of a Lost Civilization.

A wonderful collection of golden treasure has recently reached New York, and has created a great deal of interest.

The treasure was taken from the graves of long dead Chibchas, an ancient race which once occupied the territory where the Republic of Colombia is now situated. The Chibchas were highly civilized, and much resembled the Incas, Aztecs, Mayas and Toltecs, but the race died out soon after the arrival of the Spaniards in America, and only a few remnants remain in Colombia. The treasure is very valuable, and is the result of five years' excavation by natives at Ayapais, their employer entrusting it to a South American banker, who took it to New York to be disposed of.

A New York paper thus describes the treasure, which is of solid gold: Most gorgeous of all are the breastplates, eight of them. Some are thirty inches across, great blazing yellow suns, ornately embossed with designs of crocodiles and serpents. Others are sixteen inches in diameter, with beautiful work in repousse.

More exquisite in taste and infinitely more difficult of execution are the filigree earrings. Wonderful things from tip to tip, across the diameter of a semicircle. At first glance, the design seems to be made of seven strips of gold lace, fairy-like in delicacy. But lift one! No modern stamping of material in these pieces. The ancient artisan has used at least $100 worth of the virgin metal for this single piece. The meshes of the lace are not gold wire, skillfully soldered. The whole ornament is one integral chunk of metal, the filigree painfully cut out by sharp tools.

The thing is amazing. It is not simply interesting, but like so many relics of the past, it is beautiful.

Dainty Filigree Work.

So with the strings of gold beads, where a dainty filigree ball alternates with a plain bead; or where a heavy little cross like a child's packstone alternates with a plain bead. Or where twenty-six tiny bells of beautiful, faint tone, each a little larger than a BB shot, are spaced with beads of coiled gold wire.

Then two strings of bells of solid, polished gold; heavy to the hand; the bells are an inch long each and three-quarters of an inch in diameter, eleven in number on one string, thirteen on the other, spaced with little tubes of gold. These went round the thighs and chimed as the wearer moved, it is believed. Incidentally, a 24-carat gold bell is as sweet in tone as a silver bell, which is a thing few of us knew, or were likely to find out.

Then there's an amusing little monkey, sitting in a chair—a perfect little chair, no different from the ones we use to-day; wearing a sort of broad-brimmed hat and holding the half of a coconut shell beneath his chin, while his elbows rest on his knees. The whole thing is an inch or so high and an inch and a half long. It fitted on the end of a staff or sceptre.

Exquisite Animals.

Other staff tips are fashioned like birds with long and crooked bills. Some of them are perfectly recognizable as species still to be found in Colombia. There is a filigree jaguar, an inch long; it also was a sceptre tip. There are frogs or buckles of gold heavy as any two signet rings you ever "hailed." One earring, and only one, is ornamented with bangles that tinkle charmingly. Above the row of bangles are two rows of the exquisite gold lace which isn't lace at all, but a lattice cut from the solid piece of metal, and held in a frame of elaborate scroll work.

There's an opulent nose piece, like a crescent moon with the tips incurved so they almost touch. There is not a scroll or a scratch or an ornament upon it. It was intended, doubtless, to flash in the rays of the sun like a mirror, when the wearer's lips moved. Like everything else, it is twice as thick as it needs to be to get the effect; economy of the metal was no part of the Chibchas' concern.

Finally, there are rolls of sheet gold; many square feet of it. In the grave it lay about one skeleton as though it had been a robe. A shroud of gold!

BORN.

"Finis."

With the death of Eugenie de Montijo, ex-Empress of France, there passes from the world stage the perfect figure of romance. The years of tranquil obscurity that have closed the circle of her existence have largely dimmed the wonderful picture of her career. To the rising generation she was nothing but a name, but it was a name which even to them stood for the embodiment of adventure. Meritman or Oppenheim might have written the story which is to be found instead in the sober pages of history and which now at last is closed.

What her rightful place may be in the tremendous drama of '70-71 and the years immediately preceding it must ever remain unknown. There are those who believe that, mated with a worthier companion, she might have risen to the dizzy heights of a Josephine or a Marie Louise. On the other hand, the cataclysm that befell her adopted country under the rule of the frigid weakling to whom her destiny was linked was hastened and made the more complete by her unbridled ambition. Perhaps the justest view of Eugenie is that she was only a pawn in the world-shaking tragedy which irrevocable Fate had prepared and in which individuals counted after all for very little.

Whatever may be the verdict of the future upon her and upon her career the "fateful fever" is over and the tired old woman who, once upon a time, dazzled the world with her beauty and threatened it with her power, has passed into the great silence. She played for mighty stakes and lost. The wheel has swung full circle.—Montreal Daily Star.
