Re Docent Take Much Medicine and Advises the Reporter Not Te.

"Humbug? Of course it is. The so-called science of medicine is a humbug and has been from the time of Hippocrates to the present. Why the biggest crank in the Indian tribes is the medicine man."

"Very frank was the admission, especitally so when it came from one of the biggest young physicians of the city, one whose practice is among the thousands, though he has been graduated but a few years," says the Buffalo Courier. "Very cook was his office, too, with its cheerful grate five, its Queen Anne farniture, and its many lounges and easy chairs. He stirred the fire lazily, lighted a fresh cigar, and went on,"

"Take the prescriptions laid down in the books and what do you find? Poison mainly, and nauseating stuffs that would make a healthy man an invalid. Why in the world science should go to poisons for its remedies I cannot tell, nor can I find anyone who can."

"How does a doctor know the effect of his medicine?" he saked. "He calls, prescribes, and goes away. The only way to judge would be to stand over the bed and watch the patient. This cannot be done. So really I don't know how he is to tell what good or hurt he does. Some time ago, you remember, the Boston Globe sent out a reporter with a stated set of symptoms. He went to eleven prominent physicians and brought back eleven different prescriptions. This just shows how much science there is in medicine."

There are local diseases of various characters for which nature provides positive remedies. They may not be included in the regular physician's list, perhaps, because of their simplicity, but the evidence of their curative power is beyond dispute. Kidney disease is cured by Warner's Safe Cure, a strictly herbal remedy. Thousands of persons, every year, write as does H. J. Gardiner, of Pontiac, R. I., Aug. 7, 1890:

"A few yoars ago I suffered more than probably ever will be known outside of myself, with kidney and liver complaint. It is the old story—I visited doctor after doctor, but to no a

She followed the road into a bower of trees, overhanging it so densely that the pass appeared like a rabbit's burrow, and presently reached a side entrate to the park. The clouds rose more rapidly than the farmer had anticipated; the sheep moved in a trail, and complained incoherently. Livid gray shades, like those of molern Freuch painters, made a mystery of the dark and remote corners of the vista, and seemed to iasist upon a suspension of breath. Before she was half-way across the park the thunder rumbled distinctly.

The direction in which she had to go

The direction in which she had to go would take her close by the old manorhouse. The air was perfectly still, and between each low rumble of the thunder behind she could hear the roar of the waterfail before her, and the ereak of the engine lard by it. Hurrying on, with a growing dread of the gloom and of the approaching storm, she drew near the old house, now rising before her against the dark follage and sky in tones of strange whiteness.

On the flight of steps, which descended from a terrace in front to the lett of the park, stood a man. He appeared, partly from the relief the position gave, to his figure, and partly from fact, to be of toward height. He was dark in outline, and was looking at the sky, with his hands behind him.

She must turn to him now. "I think it is going to rain," she remarked, for the sake of saying something.

He could not conceal his surprise and admiration of her face and bearing. He said, courteously, "It may possibly not rain before you reach the house, if you are going there."
