The largest crowd of the season went down to Port Stanley yesterday and helped the Irish Benevolent Society to celebrate their sixteenth annual pienic. As 6,500 were down there, including five large train loads from London, it is needless to say that some went who were not Irish. But be that as it may, there could hardly be found a person who was not at least an Irishman for the day. There were Irishmen from Africa (one of them won a race), sunny Italy sent her quota, some were born in the land o' cakes, some, perhaps, talked with a cockney accent, and there were thousands who, if they were not direct from the Emerald Isle, were descended from forefathers who were, and thus the large crowd was made up. All nationalities, creeds and religions fraternized together in a manner that would make a friend of strife believe that the millennium had come. The early morning trains were crowded until standing room on the platform was at a premium, and so were the afternoon trains. The usual half-holiday was observed with the shopkeepers, and numbers were added to the crowd thereby. It is notable that there were no accidents of any kind. Nothing occurred to mar the pleasure of the cuting.

The weather was all that could be desired; a cool breeze blew from the lake and there was the usual crowd of bathers.

The weather was all that could be desired; a cool breeze blew from the lake and there was the usual crowd of bathers. Those who did not care to take a trip out on the lake found plenty to eccupy their time on the hill. The sports were really fine, some of the events being very hotly contested. The married men's race resulted in a tie between James Anderson, of Westminster, and Thomas Kylie, of this city. So evenly were these men matched that the event was run three times before it was possible to decide it. Anderson won the final tie.

After the games came the prize-dancing, and the crowd around the dancing platform was almost suffocating. Many, with great disregard for life and limb, witnessed the contests from the branches of trees or the roof of the dancing hall and cheered the contestants on to victory or defeat. The dancing hall was well filled all day and during the evening. THE DANCING.

Having just opened a case of Heptonette Waterproofs, we think it opportune to give a little talk on this cloth—to explain what it is and wherein it differs from other waterproof materials. First, it is guaranteed perfectly porous yet rain-repellant. Second it is an odorless cloth. Third, it contains no rubber. These three features will be appreciated by the ladies, who are doubtless familiar with the old-time air-tight rubber garment and its nauseating aroma. Besides, it is claimed for these cloaks that they are the better of being thoroughly well dried before a fire after being out in the rain. Heat spoils the old proof but improves the Heptonnette garments.

The goods to hand are the latest fall styles. They are all made with detachable capes this season and are very useful and stylish for traveling purposes.

Assistant Superintendent Thompson, of the M. C. R., was at Port directing the train management in the evening. He very considerately gave instructions that trains be started when sufficiently filled, instead of waiting until the time specified.
