ing that the lock-out of the bosses has assumed a new phase, which may end in a very interesting legal controversy. The leaders of the workmen directly or indirectly affected have decided to test the legality of the combination of the bosses to prevent the sale of material, and determined efforts are being made to obtain the best legal talent to prosecute their case. The plan mapped out has been to lay the matter before State's Attorney Grinnell. The supposition is that the State's Attorney cannot, even if they have done anything illegal, obtain indictments against the bosses, there being no grand jury in session now. The labor people talk of procuring warrants from a police justice and arresting some of the more prominent bosses.

the police.

It was 7 o'clock yesterday morning when O'Brien and Kilbride were roused from sleep, which they were in great need of after the rumpus of the night before. They breakfasted together at the Rossin and at 8.15 they entered a carriage with Messrs. Mulligan and Cahill, and drove to Union Station, where quite a gathering, largely composed of friends, was awaiting them. As Mr. O'Brien stepped aboard a parlor car of the Canadian Pacific Railway train which was to bear him to Ottawa, there were demands for a speech. He spoke briefly and thanked his friends for what he said was a right noble reception. Notwithstanding the trouble that had co-curred he would carry away kindly feelings of Toronto, and he was willing to leave to the fair judgment of the people the giving of a verdict as to the cowardly attempt to murder him. He closed with a fervent "God bless you all," and entered the car.

At 8.30, amid many cheers and a few groans, the train drew out, Messrs. O'Brien and Kilbride sitting in comfortable chairs and chatting with Messrs. Mullran, Cahill, Tracy, Boyle, Curran, Byrne, O'Byrne and Brother Odo, and Mr. Mulcahy of Orillia, who were accompanying him around the "Horn." Half a dozen fog signals were exploded as the train went through the yard. At Parkdale, West Toronto Junction and North Toronto the car was entered by guite a number of people, who bade United Ireland's editor god-bye. The league officers quitted the car at North Toronto.

Mr. Wall, the Associated Press Agent, who was hurt on Wednesday night, was on the train, looking worn and weary but not suffering much from the soalp wound he had received. He was very indignant, however, about the treatment of the mob. Secretary Cahill, whose head also had been out, had it fixed up, and he wore a new pair of eye-glasses.

After the Skirmish.

Mr. Thomas Lalor, whose shop was invaded by the mob on Wednesday night, addressed a letter to the Mayor yesterday requesting that an appraiser be sent to examine into the amount of damage. He had his appraiser at work there yesterday and the damage cannot be less than $500. Some big stones were found in the place.

The Mayor regrets that there was any trouble, but he is of opinion that Mr. O'Brien and Mr. Kilbride acted very unwisely in attempting to walk about without having requested police protection.

John McRaley, who was arrested in connection with the trouble, appeared in the Police Court yesterday morning. C. S. Longley and John Ryan gave evidence to show that the prisoner was hooting and groaning, that he had thrown something at Mr. O'Brien and that he attempted to catch hold of the agitator. He was remanded till Monday to enable him to produce witnesses.

Michael Starrs, Fresident of the Local League, and J. L. Dowlin, President of St. Patrick's Literary Association, were driven in a four-in-hand to the Russell, in the corridor of which a large crowd had gathered. The party entered by a private door, however, and the crowd were disappointed. Some one called for three cheers for the Queen, which were given by a few, who then sang "God Save the Queen." A few others then cheered Mr. O'Brien. Some warm words were exchanged over this incident, but no blows were struck. The Reception Committee lunched with Mr. O'Brien at the Russell before the lecture.

Mr. O'Brien at the Rink.

In the Rink, where about 1000 persons had assembled, Mr. O'Brien received a hearty reception. The students of the College of Ottawa were present in a body, leading in the cheers and singing "God Save Ireland." Mr. J. L. Dowling, who presided, read a telegram from Archbishop O'Brien and content of the patrick's the paralyzer of high prices, last summer conceived the idea of setting one day apart each week in which to offer the special bargains purchased below regular figures. The success of the enterprise surpasses our most sangulae dream. Last Monday the Waterloo House was jammed with purchasers, who were more than pleased with the solid bargains they carried away.

O'Brien was glad to get out of Toronto yesterday morning, and took the train for Ottawa. His nerves were considerably shaken, and he wished he had taken certain advice and bought one of Strathern's refrigerators and got into it during the melee on Wellington-street, Toronto, where he would have been norfectly safe, as they are durable, cool and cheap and are necknowledged by the public to be the best in the city.

The Offer of McCarthy of Syracuse.

Syracuse, May 19.—John McCarthy, an undertaker in this city who is something of a character, paid for the insertion in the papers to-day of an announcement that in case William O'Brien is injured in Canada that he will guarantee to give the slayer of Lansdowne $100 a year for ten years. This money will be given in a mortgage of McCarthy's property. McCarthy also says that he will furnish a fac-simile of the Grant coffin to lay Lansdowne in, in case of his death.

Editor World: The annexation papers make a great mistake in supposing farmers in favor of commercial union. It would be the ruin of the farmers. When the National Policy was inaugurated it was urged in its favor that farmers would have a market at their own doors, that instead of devoting themselves to raising grain, on which there was small and often precarious profit, they would, by means of manugrain, on which there was small and often pre-carious profit, they would, by means of manu-factures, have large centres of population cre-ated mear them which would create demands for fruits, vegetables and "garden sass" generally, on which the profits are large. This the National Policy has measurably succeeded in doing. Mixed farming is making farmers rich. There is a ready demand for all we can produce. But even as it is, we have to fight the Yankees in our own markets. The Toronto market and Things were changing. Russia and India once were customers for our cereals; now they were energetic competitors. We were told that our fisheries were inexhaustible, our forests were unlimited, and our phosphate beds were the best in the world. We were asked to give up these, and what would we have in return?
