th medical men on the subject of the al orial columns of July 30. Dr. Portugolol was said to have discovered that strychnine administered subcutaneously in doses of five drops of a solution of 200 drops of water found wide circulation, being printed in nearly every newspaper of standing in the country. We submitted it to a leading ministry authority who at once pronounced the treatment dangerous and one he could not adorse. We drew attention to the fact and called for further evidence. None of the medical gentlemen of the to thought proper to respond to the appeal, but The World has elicited from the physcians of Toronto a valuable contribution to what was previously known on the subject of the suggested remedy. We are sorry for the sake of those who had been led to hope, of the suggested remedy. We are sorry for the sake of those who had been led to hope, from the positive language used in describing Portugoloff's alleged discovery, a way of curing drunkenness had at last been found, that the almost unanimous verdict was against the use of the drug in the manner stated. The majority of the doctors interviewed were perfectly familiar with strychnine in connection with alcoholium. In not a single instance had it been found of permanent benefit. In some cases temporary relief had been afforded, but this was the case as well where other remedies were tried. Patients had been saturated with strychnine, and in a fortnight after the termination of the treatment were wallowing in fifthy drunkenness as badly as ever.

The danger of a powerful poison like strychnine being put into what might almost be termed general use was also pointed out. Summing up, the interviews must be accepted as closing the door to hope for the promised results from the new treatment in spite of a tew expressions of uncertainty from doctors who, whilst unable to endorse the remedy, were still unprepared to declare against it. Opinion was almost unanimous that no remedy known to medical men is of the slightest use as a cure for drunkenness. Speaking on this point, some of the doctors said the cure hes in the hands of drunkards themselves. They alone deede what and when they will drink. The choice of water or alcohol, harmless fulds or rank madefining poisons, is open to them, and if they prefer the poisons no power outside themselves can prevent them so long as the stuff is to be had at every turn as easy as a paper of cigarettes or a yard of calico.

The lesson then to be learnt from these as easy as a paper of cigarettes or a yard of calico.

The lesson then to be learnt from these most valuable interviews is that sufferers from drunkenness need not look to drugs for cure from drunkenness, though relief from the craving may be had at the critical moment when to give way to it may be mischievous or is most to be dreaded. Further, that cure is possible but must come from within, not from drugs. The man or woman who is a slave to alcohol must throw off the shackles by the exercise of his or her own will, or if his or her will is too feeble, the duty of those to whom the man or woman is an object of solicitude is to restore the power of the patient's mind, and direct its exercise in the right way when restored. Several of the medical men referred to the large number of sufferers from drunkenness in their care and deplored the hopelessness of these cases. The doctors were as anxious as any one could be to find out some easy and certain method of cure. The Montreal, Hamilton, London and Winnipeg press should follow up The World interviews and give the country the benefit of nipeg press should follow up The World interviews and give the country the benefit of the experience of the leading medical men of their respective cities. A comparison of views might prove unexpectedly valuable. It would at any rate be useful. It would hardly fair to direct public thought into a profitable channel. Anything that will tend to focus the intelligence of the country on the question of drugs or mental treatment cannot but do good. And that is what we are after.

A WEST END EVICTION.

rister and His Clerk.

A large quantity of house furniture piled around a vacant lot in Queen-street west, near Fanning-street, attracted the attention of every passer-by on Tuesday evening. At nightfall, when the facts connected with this outdoor exhibition of household property became generally known, a large crowd assembled on the sidewalk facing the lot, and with occasional ly known, a large crowd assembled on the side-walk facing the lot, and with occasional changes among the people who composed it, maintained its position until the "small hours." Enquiry elicited a very interesting story. The owner of the collection of bedsteads and bed-ding, tables, chairs, stoves, etc., is Mrs. Eliza-beth Pritchard, who, until yesterday morning, was carrying on business as a dealer in second-hand furniture at No. 912 Queen-street west. At two o'clock in the afternoon sheriff's officers took possession of the house, and commenced to carry and throw out the goods with which it was furnished and stocked. Everything in the building was taken out of it and placed in the vacant lot immediately west; and Mrs. Pritchard with her three children was also re-Pritchard with her three children was also re-moved and left shelterless in the midst of her effects. So far only this lady's statement of meyed and left shelterless in the midst of her effects. So far only this lady's statement of the case has been obtained, and it would be premature to comment upon the eviction.

Mrs. Pritchard, who was in a state of excitoment and indignation when seen by The World, said that a barrister had bought the house frem her husband without her knowledge or consent. She charged this barrister and his elerk with having taken advantage of a prolonged spree in which her husband midulged during the first two weeks of June last, to induce him to sell the property for little mere than half its value; and that alkhough they represent that they bought it for $3500 they paid her husband only $76, or barely sufficient to take him to England.

"On June 7 last," said Mrs. Pritchard, "my husband, E. W. Pritchard, was arrested at my desire. He had been drunk for a week, and I thought it was the only way to get him sober agains. On the morning of the 8th, Saturday, he was remanded till the following Monday. On Monday he was discharged, the barrister in question having acted as his lawyer in the meantime. On Wednesday the 12th I had an interview with my husband. There was no one but ourselves present. He told me that he had sold the house for $3000, and that he had instructed his lawyer to give me $1000 of the money," I did not see him sagain, but on the had sold the house for $3000, and that he had instructed his lawyer to give me $1000 of the money. I did not see him sgain, but on the following Saturday morning the clerk told me, when I asked him where my husband was, that he thought he was on the ocean. The fact of the matter is, as I have since learned, they kept him drunk for two weeks, and for the second week paid his board at the Albion Hotel. Then they hought a massage for him to England. second week paid his board at the Albion Hotel.
