Mr. Irving on the stage, and all of us have read the stories of Mr. Besant.

Mr. Besant is a thorough Englishman, in closest touch with modern life, and especially interested in doing his utmost to improve the welfare of the English people. He is essentially a man of the people. He takes a hopeful view of the problems of fife, and he has sought in sown successful way to ameliorate the life and surroundings of the common, every-day citizen of London. He has made a study of the world's metropolis, including its past, as well as its present, having straw beds and Government record. blankets. The officers are at the Grand Two the crown will have an opportunity to sift the spurious evidence that was given on behalf of the prisoners, for spurious everyone believes it to be. The crime charged against the prisoners is diabolical enough to make us loth to credit it, but in the light of the facts that are known no other conclusion is open to us than that the two brothers are guilty of a conspiracy involving the salute at noon.

The Kilties' appearance and deportment elicited unqualified expressions of approval from all quarters. The united forces returned to camp after the street parade and dined. Trooping the colors, a feu de joie and various field manoeuvres occupied the afternoon. These movements were executed with but little cause for adverse criticism.
