TORONTO.
Toronto, Sept. 10.—The run at the city cattle market consisted of 62 cars, containing 950 cattle, 1,350 sheep and lambs, 300 hogs and 150 calves.

The usual conditions applied to today's market. Good cattle were in good demand and were not to be had, and poor cattle were plentiful, with little demand for them at all.
There is no inquiry for stockers and feeders, as the farmers have no pastures to put them on if they did buy them.
Exporters are practically not to be had, and the class of cattle that are being sent over to the old country markets are our good butcher cattle, costing about $4 50 to $4 75 a cwt. and weighing about 1,200 pounds.

The fact of the matter is, there are no cattle in the country, and as the farmer reads that good prices are to be obtained for good cattle, he says to himself that he has just the kind of cattle that they want, and sends them in and everybody is doing the same.

MY IMPRESSION OF THE BRITISH ISLES.

In my former letter I endeavored to describe the manner in which the first few weeks, spent in the motherland, had impressed me, and now after spending more than two months here, I would like to give you some description of a few of the places I have visited. The "Emerald Isle" has some of the most beautiful scenery in the world. The Killarney lakes and their surroundings can scarcely be surpassed in their grandeur.

Is it any wonder that poets and artists love this beautiful spot. To see it for ourselves we have come over into County Kerry, the south-western part of Ireland, and stand some forty miles north of Cork and two hundred south-west of Dublin. There are three lakes here, strung on a crooked, connecting stream, like jewels on a ribbon. The upper lake, the smallest of the three, holds eight little islands in its arms and is itself protected by the surrounding mountains. The scene is endlessly varied, with all the coquettish, alluring curves where the shores appear and disappear and come in sight again. The rocks and hills and streams, all around here are thick with old legends of giants and fairies, and many tourists, even in this modern age, look for the "little people" who dwell in this enchanted land. We must say only a word or two about Blarney Castle. Who has not heard of the Blarney stone? The stone is set in the castle wall away up in the north-east angle of the tower, several feet below the battlement, an inscription was once here but now is illegible from the effect of time and weather. As we look at this high structure, with walls eighteen feet thick, we think of the age of Elizabeth, and King William and Cromwell, when this castle bore an important part in many of the heavy sieges of the most important of the heavy such places as "Phoenix Park" or "St. Patrick's Cathedral" leave a good impression upon the tourist. Then the trip down Sackville street in the famous "jaunting-car" will not soon be forgotten. This is the most beautiful street in Dublin, the buildings being quite modern and the surroundings most beautiful. Just a word about the great "Fair", the Irish International Exhibition, which is held in Dublin this year. The buildings are very beautiful, all being perfectly white and with the fancy decorations and electrical play on the grounds and I am more proud than ever of my native land and in the midst of all the exhibits from the various countries of the world, the one which appealed most to me was the "Canadian Exhibit." Without prejudice I can truly say that it was the best display on the grounds and I am more proud than ever of my native land and in the midst of all I felt like shouting "The Maple Leaf Forever." One could easily spend a day or two looking through the Canadian Pavilion, it is so large and every exhibit is interesting as well as magnificent. Leaving the Emerald Isle and crossing the sea, after landing at Holyhead, we pass through Wales and any description of this little country that we have heard, does not exaggerate it in any way, because one would have to travel a long distance to see anything more beautiful than the scenery in Wales. Then I spent a day or two at Blackpool, one of the most famous seaside resorts or "watering-places" in England. I have witnessed great crowds of people but never have I seen one half the number at any one place that I saw here. All classes, rich and poor, farmers and gentry, masters and servants, all come here together for their holidays. The high tower, the winter gardens, the palace, the sports, the promenade and the magnificent sands are beyond description, and of all the places I have visited, none will be more fondly remembered than this famous "resort." Travelling on from the sea-coast, inland, we come to the most beautiful inland scenery in the British Isles, unless it may be the Highlands of Scotland. In Dovedale, with its winding stream, and evergreen hedges and verdant trees, one could spend hours, then climbing the hills and ascending to the summit of "Thorpe Cloud" a mountain peak nearby, as we look over the valleys men and horses look like mere specks upon the earth. While we are up among the clouds, so wonderful it seems, here we are in England enjoying these grand sights, which can even compare with even the beauties of Switzerland. We must not forget to say a word about Scotland "The Land of the Heather." Edinburgh claims to be the most beautiful city in the world and in many respects she rightly claims this privilege. It is situated on the east coast, about two miles from the estuary of the River Forth. As we look down Princess street, a mile-long avenue, we see both a fashionable promenade and a main business thoroughfare, chief among its objects of interest is that graceful monument to Sir Walter Scott. It was erected in 1844 at a cost of $80,000. Other important places of interest are, the University, National Gallery, Edinburgh Castle and the Royal Institute. Again we stand by Loch Katrine, 400 feet above the sea level. This little lake, only ten miles long, is very deep, in many places over 500 feet. Placid and clear its water reflects as from a mirror the surrounding scenery. It was on one of these hills above this lake that Sir Walter Scott made his hero meet the Highland rebel and his men.

"These are Clan Alpine warriors true And, Saxon, I am Roderick Dhu." Here, although only sixty miles from Edinburgh, the great metropolis, here the little islets seem to float in beauty on the water, a dream within a dream, far "far from the meddling crowd." Edinburgh is not the only beautiful city in Scotland, for Glasgow, with its Parks, University, Art Gallery, Churches and Shipping and Building Docks, has a grandeur which, in some respects seems to surpass even Edinburgh. As we take the "tram car" and journey out through the country we come to Paisley, an old historic spot. Here we see Coates' famous thread mills and Wallace's old castle and other important and interesting places.

The Scotch people are genuine in all their ways and of all the places I have visited in my travels, the impression of Scotland will stand among the first. The Scotch "lassies" are certainly "bonnie" and the "laddies" are brave and true. Such is the impression that I have of this motherland and after touring for a few weeks, yet, perhaps visiting Paris and other places on the continent, I shall return to Ontario, much wiser in experience and knowledge than when I left on May 24th. Thanking you for this space in your valuable paper,

I am, most sincerely,
ARTHUR E. DOAN,
