That recent despatch from Ottawa, Ont., which stated that Mr. John O'Connor Power was in that city, where it was believed he was intrusted by Salabury with some sort of a scheme to induce Irishmen to emigrate to Manishmen and a winterpating to the was scheme to induce Irishmen to emigrate to Manitoba, may not render uninteresting to the readers of the Republic a short sketch of Power's chequered carser as a Fenian, a Home Ruler, and, finally, as a renegade to his country and her people, which latter role, if the Ottawa despatch is to be depended upon, Mr. Power is still filling. It was in the early sixties that O'Country Power firsh came into prominence still filling. It was in the early sixties that O'Connor Power first came into prominence in Ireland. The Fenian movement was then showing considerable activity, and one of the most industrious of its propagandists, was the gentleman with whom this sketch deals. In 1850 the Fenains in England contemplated the seizure of the military barracks at Chester, and to Power was assigned the direction of that en-terprise. The projected attack upon the bar-racks never took place, bowever, for the very good reason that somebody conveyed information of it to the police. That somebody, though his identity was never discovered, has been his identity was never discovered, has been agid by more than one Irishman to have been no other person than the man who was given the management of the whole affair. Numerous arrests, of course, followed the disclosure of the plot, but John O'Connor Power was not one of those taken into custody. As n. mapor of the contemplated seizure, he was intrusted with considerable funds by the organization back of the movement, and he made use of those funds to put himself beyond the reach of the British bobbies. Some of the men who trusted him were not so fortunate, however, and many of them had to endure long terms of imprisonment, owing to the treachery of an informer, who was believed by many of them to be the very man who induced them to embark in the hazardous undertaking which resulted in putting them behind the bars of a

and, when the movement took the form of securing control of the Irish parliamentary seats, he presented himself to the Mayo electors as a candidate for that constituency. The priests, who knew Power's character and record, were against him to a man. They told the people that he would certainly betray them if they sent him to London as their epresentative, but Power still stood well with the Fenians, and he worked that organization for all it was worth. The consequence was that, despite the opposition of the priests, he was returned to Parliament, and to give the devil his due, he seems to have remained loyal enough to seems to have remained loyal enough to bis constituents in the years that immediately followed his election. When, in the course of time, Mr. Parnell and Mr. Biggar began their course of obstruction, I ower, then a follower of Butt, even went so far as to lend these two gen-tlemen some support, though his assistance was not of the sort that could be depended upon. At the time that this country was celebrating the c-ntennial of its independence, in 1876, Ireland, mindful of the par hor sons had played in defeat ing the British in the revolutionary war, thought I nothing more than fit that she should send her congratulations to the United States, and the to receive the Irial representatives or to accept the congratulations of which they were the beavers. His mission being thus rendered abortive, Mr. Parnell quietly attended to his private affairs, but O'Conner Power went here and there delivering granding speeches and predicting prompt success for Home Rule. As Ireland's accredited representative, he was, of course, well received by the Irish-American people, who did not suspect that a man who denounced England as fiercely as he did then would ever prove recrease to Ireland for the aske of handling Government gold or filling

A GOVERNMENT'S POSITION.

In 1878 the Irish Home Rulers held a conference in Dublin to determine what policy the members should follow in Parliament. Butt, who was present at the conference, introduced a resolution to the effect: "That in the opinion of this conference the cordial acquiescence in the resolutions is essential to that unity without which it is impossible to maintain an independent Irish party in the House of Com-mons, and that while we deprecate any undue interference with the !| borty of personal action, we are of opinion that no Irish member ought to persevere in any course of action which shall be declared by a resolution adopted at a meeting of the Home Rule members to be calculated to be injurious Rule members to be calculated to be injurious to the national cause." This resolution was not worded strongly enough to suit Mr. Power, however, and he introduced another one declaring "That the hostitility with which the just and constitutional demands for self-government made by a majority of the Irish representations. sentatives has been met with by both English parties in the House of Commons increases the obligation which the Home Rule members are under of adhering to their engagements to hold themselves sloof from understandings, combinations or alliances with any English party not pledged to support a measure for the establishment of Irish Parliament, and makes it essential to the success of the Irish cause that more determined and vigorous action should be taken by the parliamentary party."
And not to deal unjustly with Power, it must be confessed that at the outset be showed himself in earnest and proved loval to the cause of home rule. In 1879, when the famine of that year begin to show its alarming proportions, he was one of the most importunate of all the Irish members in asking Chief Secretary Lowther in the House what the Covernment intended doing for the relief of the afflicted peagantry. At Irishtown, in Mayo, where the Land League was born April 20, 1879, he was the chief speaker at the meeting which Mr. Davist had arranged for and promoted. In 1881 he forcibly protested against the action of the Gladstone government in passing the coercion bill, and introduced a resolution denouncing the conduct of the speaker in sun narily closing the debate and refusing to allow to be heard. A few days later he was suspended with twenty seven other Irish parliamentarians, for 'contumacy," and compelled to leave his seat in the House.

It was not long, however, before the unreliable side of Power's character began to show itself. Whether it was because he was jealous itself. Whether it was because he was jealous of some of his colleagues, or for the reason that his nature was false that he proved recreant to his country and his constituents, is a matter of no importance. The Irish party soon became aware that it could no longer trust the member for Mayo, and it began to be bruited about his Power was looking for a salaried position. Gladstone was then in the heyday of his ministerial strength, and the outlook for Home Rule was anything but inspiriting. Power evident y lost hope, and epiriting. Power evident y lost hope, and thought the hest thing he could do was to look out for number one while he was in position to be able to do so. The consequence was that he be saile to do so. The consequence was that he beyan to barter with the government, and on an important division, one vitally concerning the liberties of the Irish people, he went into the government lobby and proclaimed himself a traitor and a renegade to Ireland. That act consummated, he lost no opportunity of denouncing the Irish members on the floor of the house, and, on one memorable occasion, he made a particularly members on the floor of the house, and, on one memorable occasion, he made a particularly dastardly attack upon Mr. Parnell, to which that gentlemen, with his characteristic good sense, never deighed to reply. The Gladstone ministry came to an ultimate end, however, in 1885, and Power found himself out of place, and he had sense enough to know that he could get no Irish constituency to elect him as its representative. Nothing daunted, though and spurred on by the hope that the Liberals, if they carried the country, would provide for his future, he turned carpet-bagger and went to England in search of a constituency. The word had gone out, however, from the league word had gone out, however, from the league leaders to the Irish voters in England to op-pose the Liberal candidates everywhere, and, although no command was necessary in Power's case, the Irish vote defeated him in the eloctorate he contested, and consigned him to politi cal oblivion. The doors of Parliament closed to him, the renegade tried the bar. In his early Fenian days, he had attended an Irish college for a short term and got a smattering of Latin. He supplemented this now with the study of the law, and obtained admission to the English bar. But fortune refused to smile on the traitor, and he was forced to eke out a living, and a very precarious one it was, by contribut-ing articles to such papers as would accept anything from his pen.

resulting, as had its predecessor, in the return of the Parnellites to Parliament, convinced Power that he made a terrible miscalculation when, in the dark days of 1883-4, he figured out that the Home Rule cause stood no chance of success, and that the best thing he could, consequently, do was to sell his country for a dozen persons were present at the time. Government position. With characteristic audacity and assurance, however, he resolved to make another effort to regain the confidence of the Irish people. He assumed the role of a political penitent, and went so far as to make a rousing Home Rule speech in the hope that his past delicquencies and treason would be forgotten and forgiven. Michael Davitt, who always had a warm feeling for Power on account of the speech he made that April morning in 1870, at Irishtown on the occasion of the birth of the old Land League, even interceeded in his behalf, and appeals were Haadouarters for the night. He was taken made for his reinstatement in popular favor by When this affair had blown over, and the excitement consequent upon it had subaided, O'Connor Power came into notice again as an active Fenian agitator. He went from town to town throughout Ireland and England urging his countrymen to organize, and soliciting and receiving money for the cause. When Isaac Butt, in 1870, started his home rule movenment, in which, by the way, the late King-Harman took a prominent part, Power, always on the lookout for his own interests. one or two Nationalist newspapers. These efforts proved unavailing, however. The Irish party and people seem to have thought that party and people seem to have thought that Power had sinned beyond the possibility of being pardoned, and the recreant representative of his race was given to understand that no more honors would be conferred upon, and no further trust placed in him. He accordingly prostration, situation.

Early this spring, sometime about March, without making any previous declaration of his intentions, l'ower unexpectedly made his appearance in this country. His coming was, as already remarked, unheralded, and no welcome, which greeting would have been denied him in any case, was accordingly given him. No notice, in fact, was taken of his presence in this country until a personal friend of his interested himself in his behalf and induced the Brownson Club, of Louisville, Ky., a Catholic organiza-tion, to tender him a reception. Power had been lounging about Louisville, where he ap pears to have some friends, for some time and posing as "O'Connor Power, ex-M.P. of London," and his friend, alluded to above, told the members of the Brownson club that, if they gave him a reception, he would re-turn the favor by delivering a lecture from which their treasury would be certain

TO REAP FINANCIAL ADVANTAGES.

The reception was consequently tendered, but it proved more or less of a failure, and th manner in which the organization was upbraided by the press for having honored a renegade convinced the members that a lecture by O'Connor Power would scarcely pay in the Kentucky capital. Foiled at the outset then who were chosen to carry her good wishes were Mr. Parnell and John O'Countr Power, It is not necessary to refer here to the churlish and insulting manner in which Gen. Grant, who was then in the last year of his second term, and at his worst an executive officer, refused to receive the Irah years of the agent of the here of his hear of was heard of him here until this Ottawa dis-patch was printed, and from this it would appear that Power, despairing of all other avenues to wealth, had sold himself to the Tory Coarcionists in much the same fashion that he bartered his honor away to the Liberal ones of five years ago. Salisbury has long been desirous of promoting Irieh emigration to Manitoba, that cheerless country from which all who are able to do so fly tlsewhere on the first opportunity. Power was quick to see an opening in that scheme for the furtherance of his own selfish interests, and the Ottawa dispatch says that he has just returned to the Dominion capital from a visit to Manitoba, whither he was sent by Salisbury to promote the Tories' plan of depopulating Ireland. It is not necessary to point out here how Power's advocacy of this Manitobs migration is certain to prejudice the Irish people against the dice the Irish people against the whole scheme. That fact was editorially commented upon in last week's Republic, but, if the Ottawa tele-gram be correct, Power has reached a lower level of recreancy and disgrace than any he had hitherto attained, and is now engaged in a despicable effort to lure the people he has betrayed in London to exile and starvation in the cold Canadian North-West.

ATTACKED IN THE CONFESSIONAL AN INSANE MAN TRIES TO ASSASSINATE A PRIEST IN NEW ROCHELLE

New York, June 19 .- "You marry people here!" shouted Jeremiah Meshar, of New Rochelle, Saturday evening to the Rev. Dr. in the confessional. Meehan, who is looked upon by the villagers as insane, was mar-ried to Annie Dooley six years ago by Father McLouphlin. The marriage was anything but a happy one, and since then it is said that Mechan in his insane freaks en-tertained feelings of hatred towards the priest. All day Saturday he acted strangely, and late that evening visited the pastoral residence, adjoining the church, and demanded admittance. The servant girl asked the relief. stranger his business. Instead of answering A to he drew a stiletto and endeavored to plunge the weapon into the girl's neck. She screamed for assistance and succeeded in escaping the mad man's clutches by the back door. Meehan then turned his attention towards the little church where Father Mc-Loughlin sat in the confessional. Some this enclosure and was told by the pastor to retire to the other side. Mechanically he obeyed, only to unsheath his knife and make several wild attempts on Father McLoughlin's life. The latter's outcry brought several persons to his assistance, including John Dune, who pounced upon Headquarters for the night. He was taken yesterday before Drs. Huntingdon and E. B. Teffr, a medical commission appointed by Justice Kearney to enquire into his sanity.

A SUICIDE'S DEATH.

Escape the Law.

AYLMER, Oat., June 19. - Great excitement has been caused throughout the town this evening by the suicide of G. W. Goodfellow, proprietor of the Aylmer rolling flour mills. About a week ago his 15 year old daughter Lilian left her home, and it trans-pired she had been ill-treated by her father, who, it is reported, has whipped her most unmercifully for trifling effairs at times since she was but a small child. Before leaving she left a letter with a neighboring $100—21801, 34160, 49926, 56099, 71200, friend to be mailed to her father, but he 75023, 81875, 94829, 22804, 37524, 50558, having left almost immediately in search of 56546, 74909, 80017, 92060, 97535, 27477, her, the letter was not posted, but was handher, the letter was not posted, but was handed to the minister of the church, to which Mr. Goodfellow belonged. Shortly after the letter was opened. It accused the father of intimacy with the daughter in a most unnatural and revolting manner, extending over some four or five years. She declaring she could endure it no longer left and went to her aunt's in Buffalo, but the father traced and brought her back on Monday, the 11th of this month. The town authorities were slow in acting on the matter until to-day, when Lawyers Stevens and Tremeer issued a warrant for the arrest of Mr. Goodfellow, who, while being arrested drew a revolver and shot himself through the brain.

FIGHTING FOR THEIR BREAD.

Windsor Tailoresses Slart in Business on Their Own Account,

WINDSOR, Ont., June 19 .- The siriking Windsor tailors have obtained from the bosses an agreement to pay a bill of wages in all cases and to have no work made up outside the shops. The intention of these clauses ap-pears to have been to prevent women from doing tailoring work at their homes. The reason these women worked at the trade was the need of wages with which to purchase the necessaries of lite. The loss of tailorwork meant to them the deprivation of their means of living. They made known their case to influential citizens who adviced them to start a business of their own account, promising them whatever assistance they could render. Accourdingly Miss Provencher has rented a store on Sandwich street, has hired a first class male cutter, and expects to be able to give employment to a considerable number of Windsor tailoresses. Bartlett and MacDonald and Strathe & MacDonald, proprietors of the two most prominent dry goods stores in town, have promised countenance and assistance to the courageous and industrious women. The tailors, it is reported, have threatened to prevent the tailoresses from doing any business, though in what manner the threat is to be accomplished does not appear.

IN LOVE WITH THE COACHMAN. WEALTHY WIDOW OF DETBOIT BECOMES IN-PATUATED WITH A HANDSOME YOUNG

COACHMAN,

DETROIT, Mich., June 20.—Fashionable society is stirring itself and has been "all agog" for several days over the announcement that Mrs. Emma L., widow of B. L. Farrington, a prominent wholesale coffee dealer, was to marry Frank Mann, a coach nan, formerly in the employ of the family. Mr. Farrington left his widow a fortune and one of the finest rendences on Woodward avenue. In February 1887, she on Woodward avenue. In February, 1887, she went to Europe, returning last March. Since then Mann has been a frequent caller at the house. He is twenty-eight pears old, tall, with dark even and hair and came here from Chicago He first found employment in a family Second avenue, when he was discharged for ill conduct. Mr. Farrington afterward employed him, but at the end of three months kicked him out. He continued to go to the house, however, osteneibly, as a guest of the servants. Mrs. Farrington has always moved in the best society and borne an unblemished reputation. The extreme grief which she evinced over the death of her husband and son, it is thought, may have weakened her intellect. Her friends have done everything in their power to induce her not to take such a fatal step as marriage with Mann, but she beeds them not. Mrs. Farriagton has purchased tickets to Europe for herself and Mann, and it is thought the fire. Aid had been summoned from every riage will probably take place Juring the first available source, and Reynoldsville, Renovo, Brockwayville and Pumsatauney have sent relief.

A terrible phase of the casualty is the re. to night, and leaving the city for a time, cut losse from Mann entirely, but this is acarcely expected by any one else.

> Free and easy expectoration immediately relieves and frees the throat and lungs from viscid phlegm, and a medicine that promotes this is the best medicine to use for coughs, colds. inflammation of the lungs and all affections of the throat and chest. This is precisely what Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup is a specific for, and wherever used it has given unbounded satisfaction. Children like it because it is pleasant, adults like it because it relieves and cures the disease.

A DRENCHING FOR HIS PAINS. THE BROTHER OF AN INSULTED PENNSYLVANIA GIRL RECEIVES A BUCKET OF WATER FROM HER DETRACTOR.

READING, Pa., June 20 -A handsomely dressed young man, dripping wet with cold water, jumped from a parlor window on South Seventh street, this city, at noon today, and attracted hundreds of citizens by his condition and mode of exit. An elderly woman hurriedly opened the front coor and hurled an angry exclamation after her well-soaked victim, who disappeared down a back street. He was George Wilson, aged nineteen, a clerk in City Treasurer Obold's office, and after he had exchanged his wet apparel for dry, he proceeded to Ald. Brownwell's office and swore out a warrant for the arrest of Mrs. Aanie E. Clymer.

Wilson alleged that he called at the Clymer residence to give the woman a personal notice to cease insulting his sister when she passed that way. He swore that he knocked at Mrs. Clymer's door, that she answered and asked him into the parlor. He briefly told her his business, when she excused herself, went out and in a minute or two returned with a bucket of cold water, which she dashed over him, regardless of the carpet and furniture. wandering about almost crezed with the He tried to retreat, but the woman got ahead of him, went out and turned the key. Wilson then went to the window, and just as he was climbing out Mrs. Clymer appeared again and dashed another bucket of cold water over him. When Police Sergeant Matz served the warrant Mrs. Clymer struck him with a poker, scratched him and violently resisted. She was finally landed at the police station, and subsequently released on bail. The affair is the talk of the city.

THE IMPUDENCE OF A DUKE. Can anything be more petty and paltry than the Duke of Westminster cancelling an invita-tion to dinner that he had sent to Mr. B. Spencer, because that gentleman had been a guest of the Eighty Club on the day that the club was entertaining Mr. Parnell. It is, if possible, entertaining Mr. Parnell. It is, if possible, more despicable than his having induced Mr. Gladstone to sit for his portrait, and then so d the portrait at a handsome profit, to show his contempt for the man who made him—without one merit in the world beyond the adventitions one of having inherited an immense fortuneduke. The impudence of the man in thinking that he can dictate to his guests those whom they are to meet at clubs and at other persons houses is only equal to the absurdity of his put ting himself forward as the opponent of boycot ting in Ireland, and at the same time seeking socially to boycott those who do not allow him to select their acquaintances. And this is one of England's hereditary legislators.

WHAT MATTHEW ARNOLD THOUGHT OF PURITANISM.

It is contanded that the Puritan triumph in the Civil War was the triumph of religion—of conduct and righteousness? Alas! it was its lefeat. So grossly imperfect, so false, was the Puritan conception and presentation of rightcousness, so at war with the ancient and inbred integrity, piety, good nature, and good humor of the English people, that it led straight to moral anarchy, the profligacy of the Restoration. It led to the court, the manners, the stage, the literature, which we know. It led to the long discredit of serious things, to the dryness of the eighteenth century, to the "irreligion" which vexed Butler's righteous soul, to the aversion and incapacity for all deep in-quiries concerning religion and its sanctions, to the belief so frequently found now among the followers of natural science that such followers of natural science that such inquiries are unprofitable. It led, among that middle class where religion still lived, on to a narrowness, an intellectual poverty, almost incredible. They "entered the prison of Puritanism, and had the key turned upon their spirit there for 200 years." It led to tost character of their steady and respectable life which makes one shiver; its bideousness, its mmense ennui

With reference to the "Unionist" sentiments which the cable says were lately expressed in Belfast by the retiring Moderator of the General Assembly, it may not be inappropriate to remark that the Irish Presbyterians have alto remark that the LIBB Fresbyeerians have all ways been divided into two parties on that question. One of these was National and in-dependent of government influence, opposed the Union, and furnished the bulk of the "rebel" Union, and furnished the bulk of the "rebel" element in the North, in 1798. The other was the ultra "Loyal" Orange faction, which was rewarded for its adhesion to the Union by the patronage of the "Castle," and by the "Regium Donum," a direct money-bribe which this branch of the Presbyterians enjoyed until the Disestablishment Bill left them out in the cold; while their independent National brathers like while their independent National brethren, like while their independent National brethren, like the Catholics, had to support their clergy out of their own pockets. It is more than likely that the retiring Unionist Moderator, like the Rev. Roaring Kane, belonged to that wing of the Presbyterian body that was so long and so loyally attached to the "Regium Donum" that they cannot forget its sweetness even yet. The other side, in later days, produced such men as Sharman Crawford, "Honest," John Martin, Neilson Underwood, and sturdy Joe Biggar. It is not difficult to tell which was true to Ireland, and to the right, under all circumstances.
