INSTRUCTIONS FOR CULTIVATING THE TULIP.

This magnificent and favorite flower is quite hardy, propagates freely, and can be successfully cultivated without special care. Any good dry soil, moderately rich, will suit, in which the bulbs should be planted any time between July and December, deep enough for the tops of the Bulbs to be covered about three inches. They may either be set out in patches in flower borders, or what is better, in a bed where their various rich colors will show to the best advantage. The bed should be about four feet wide and as long as desired, and the bulbs should be planted in rows about eight inches apart each way. They may stand two years without being taken up and separated; but as soon as the bloom is over the seed pods must be broken off or the strength of the roots will go to seed. Annuals may then be planted between the rows, so that the bed will be beautiful in summer and fall, as well as in spring. The stalks should be left till half withered, when they may be cut off.

The other Bulbs above named should be planted in the same way as Tulips, and none of them require any protection in winter.
