

TO

The Young Fellows

In the galleries of Bond Street Church
to whom I addressed these talks:

—Some, after serving their apprenticeships for various life callings, have returned to the beautiful Canadian towns and cities from which they came, where, I trust, they will be leaders in all good enterprises; some have answered the alluring beckon of the West, and now, forsooth, are themselves beckoning to certain young women in the galleries to follow them; others still tarry with us, resolved to have citizenship in the noblest city of the New World;

TO ALL THESE I DEDICATE
