

TABLE OF CONTENTS

12

Quebec—Who was the Father of Confederation?—Meeting in London— British Statesmen Support the Policy of Union—Its Necessity and Desirability—A Crisis in British Colonial History—The Influence of John A. Macdonald—Debates in the Canadian Legislature—Attitude of Cartier and Dorion in Lower Canada—Of Howe, and Tupper and Tilley in the Maritime Provinces—Of McGee, and Galt and George Brown in the Canadas—Accomplishment of the Policy and Birth of the Dominion of Canada	342
--	-----

CHAPTER XVIII

The Completing Confederation

The Situation of Affairs on July 1, 1867—Sir John Macdonald Forms the first Dominion Government—A Nominal Coalition—Organization of a new Administrative System—Purchase of Rupert's Land and Creation of Manitoba—The Insurrection at Fort Garry—Wolseley and Riel—The Admission of Manitoba to the Union—Organization of the Territories— Admission of British Columbia—Prince Edward Island also Comes in— The Federal Situation in Nova Scotia and its Solution	360
---	-----

CHAPTER XIX

The Treaty of Washington

Relations with the United States after the Abrogation of the Reciprocity Treaty—The Joint High Commission of 1871—Its Composition and Objects—Sir John Macdonald's Difficult Position—The Fenian Raid Claims and Canadian Fisheries—Conclusion of the Treaty—Opinion in Canada and its Ultimate Passage through Parliament—Important Issues Involved—The Patriotic Attitude of Canada—Relations of Great Britain and the United States	380
--	-----

CHAPTER XX

Political Questions and Development

The Party System in the New Dominion—Changes and Transformations— Policy of Sir John A. Macdonald—Disappearance of Old Issues—The Provinces in New Clothes—Their Ministers and Parties—Complications Between the Dominion and Provincial Authorities—Improvement in Parliament and Politics—Broader Views and Bigger Minds—Position and Character of the Governors-General—The Joly Question in Quebec —The General Elections of 1872 and 1874	394
--	-----