Seattle, Wash., Aug. 22.—The steamer George E. Starr arrived at her dock to-day from Dyea and Skaguay and was met by a great crowd, it having been reported that several men from Klondike, having made their way to salt water overland, were on board. This report proved true, but the interest centred in the appearance of one passenger, Ed. Thorp, who was expected to come down Thorp, who was expected to come down on the Portland, and who is reported on the Portland, and who is reported to have somewhere in the neighborhood of $130,000 in Klondike gold in his possession. Thorp and his companions talked, but it is impossible to get anything definite from them. Willis Thorp. the fether of Ed Thorp, received a letter of the the first state of the state of the state of the foot of Cherry-street, yesterday afternoon. Three of the bodies have been recovered by the first state of the thing definite from them. Willis Thorp, the father of Ed Thorp, received a letter a few days ago on the Alki from his son, saying that he had $130,000 in gold, at least that is what Willis Thorp is alleged to have told his friends, but now he and his three companions on now he and his three companions on the Starr unite on only one point in the Starr unite on only one point in telling their story, and that is that they have $20,000 between them.

been a rush of the luckless ones from Klondike to the new diggings.

News of the discovery reached Juneau Aug. 7, in a letter written on June 22 by James O'Brien to W. H. Hindle.
O'Brien in his brief letter declares that six of the streams tributary to the Klondike have proven richer than the most sanguine had predicted, and that their output, with the new discovery, more than redeems the gold promises of the Klondike.
O'Brien says that the news of the Dawson, but that he saw one steamer pull out for the new diggings with 170 men on board. O'Brien predicted in his letter that food would be very scarce, and supplies that are being nushed will be welcomed at any cost. O'Brien bluntly declares that Adams' Creek is no good.

Hindle is interested in the mines with O'Brien, and says he is a reliable man. He testified his faith is proport of Three Hudson River boats have been purchased by the promoters of the expedition, and it is intended to try this mode of travel if the river freezes before the Dwyer reaches Dawson.

Only seventy-five passengers will be booked on the Navarro, and they will start next Wednesday, according to the statements of the agents, even if shas not the full number, the purpose of the voyage being to carry a large consignment of provisions to St. Michael and Dawson.

"Lamb's Fleat."

The dreadful accident was caused by the presence of what is known as "Lamb's float," a drawbridge contrivance that was placed at the cut on Friday last to ferry people across to the other side of the marsh, where there are some cottages and a mile farther on the east end swimming baths for boys.
