

LIVE STOCK MARKET THE FARM

WHAT OF THE FUTURE?

Ten-cent hogs, and what of the future? Every mail brings letters of enquiry from anxious producers and feeders. The ten cent quotation, booked by bullish traders to arrive some time during 1910, got into market history sixty days ahead of the schedule prepared by those most inoculated with "bull fever." When the nine-cent hog was put over chronic "bulls," who can always see better prices ahead, set their peg for ten-dollar swine. That price, like its predecessor, was recorded in such short order as to render him speechless, as it were, for the minute, but he soon recovered. With prevailing prices highest since the close of the civil American war, higher considering the present purchasing power of the coin of the realm, anxiety as to future prices is but natural and to be expected. A careful study of the situation appears to warrant conclusion that remunerative prices for hogs for months yet to come are a practical certainty, as nearly certain as future commercial conditions can be calculated. Swine prices of unusual marketward magnetism have prevailed for so long it is useless to contend the supply in producers' hands is not now of minimum aggregate. So positive is this conviction that alarm is manifest as to the ability of raisers to restore production to near normal proportions short of an extended period. At nine to ten dollars per cwt. shots are drawn into the capacious maw of packing houses, brood sows bring more dollars than the milch cow and the premium for stags brought the knife into play on sires in such numbers as to warrant real serious alarm as to swine supplies for near future at least. Frequently during the past year we sought to encourage swine production and swine feeding. Those who heeded the admonitions thus promulgated can give best evidence as to the profits which resulted. We reiterate this advice. It is ill-advised to suggest the withholding from market of matured hogs, but young hogs, shots and brood sows should be retained on the farm. Give them a chance and your bank account will later afford evidence of your wisdom. Keep vigorously awake to the possibilities before the producer of swine. There's money in it.

DE YOUNG & CO. TO EXTEND

Likely to Open Twenty-five New Branches in Canadian Cities.
De Young & Co., haberdashers, will apply for a Dominion charter, with a view to extending the business into a limited company. J. J. De Young, one of the members of the firm, when spoken to yesterday, would not confirm the Dominion report. At present this firm has three stores in Toronto, one on Yonge-street, another on West Queen-street, and a third on the Dominion. The idea of a charter is to give them a better opportunity to establish other branches throughout the Dominion. The idea of the firm, it is said, is to establish at least 25 new branches, three in Montreal, one in Ottawa, one in Hamilton, one in Toronto, one in Winnipeg, one in Vancouver, and others in various Canadian cities. In Toronto it is possible that three new branches will be opened, one on the Dominion, one on the Queen-street, and one on the York-street.

WHAT OF THE FUTURE?

Ten-cent hogs, and what of the future? Every mail brings letters of enquiry from anxious producers and feeders. The ten cent quotation, booked by bullish traders to arrive some time during 1910, got into market history sixty days ahead of the schedule prepared by those most inoculated with "bull fever." When the nine-cent hog was put over chronic "bulls," who can always see better prices ahead, set their peg for ten-dollar swine. That price, like its predecessor, was recorded in such short order as to render him speechless, as it were, for the minute, but he soon recovered. With prevailing prices highest since the close of the civil American war, higher considering the present purchasing power of the coin of the realm, anxiety as to future prices is but natural and to be expected. A careful study of the situation appears to warrant conclusion that remunerative prices for hogs for months yet to come are a practical certainty, as nearly certain as future commercial conditions can be calculated. Swine prices of unusual marketward magnetism have prevailed for so long it is useless to contend the supply in producers' hands is not now of minimum aggregate. So positive is this conviction that alarm is manifest as to the ability of raisers to restore production to near normal proportions short of an extended period. At nine to ten dollars per cwt. shots are drawn into the capacious maw of packing houses, brood sows bring more dollars than the milch cow and the premium for stags brought the knife into play on sires in such numbers as to warrant real serious alarm as to swine supplies for near future at least. Frequently during the past year we sought to encourage swine production and swine feeding. Those who heeded the admonitions thus promulgated can give best evidence as to the profits which resulted. We reiterate this advice. It is ill-advised to suggest the withholding from market of matured hogs, but young hogs, shots and brood sows should be retained on the farm. Give them a chance and your bank account will later afford evidence of your wisdom. Keep vigorously awake to the possibilities before the producer of swine. There's money in it.
