The New Brunswick Kennel Club was organized at a meeting held Thursday in the Dufferin Hotel. More than forty members were balloted on and elected and concess or the meeting was the necessity of the city authorities adopting some means by which dogs for which license have been paid can be identified. Among other suggestions offered was one that the system of numbered brass tags attached to the collars of dogs should be adopted here. It was pointed out that by a sure way of knowing dogs unlicensed would be furnished as well as a sure means of protection to licensed canines.
