

distribute forget not," is a Divine command; and, certainly, the service of a year on the Committee of St. George's Society affords an opportunity in this direction that may well rejoice the heart of any Englishman who has the desire to minister to the wants of his needy fellow-countrymen.

It seems much to be desired that every member should keep constantly in view the benevolent and patriotic work which the Society is designed to carry out, and manifest his interest in that work by more frequent attendance at the monthly and quarterly meetings and by personally endeavouring to induce friends to join our ranks, and so enlarge the membership. There are doubtless very many Englishmen and sons of Englishmen in our city who, if the existence and objects of the Society were brought before them, would gladly unite with us, and thus extend our influence and enlarge our capacity for usefulness, and maintain and strengthen the sentiments of good fellowship, benevolence, loyalty, and love of country, which become the Sons of St. George and "Merrie England," and tend to adorn the national character of Canada, the land of our adoption.

ROBERT SPRATT,

President.

J. E. PELL,

Secretary.

