

Silesian Collapse Furtherest From One's Observation

Polanders Going Ahead With Improvements in Territory Allotted by London Award.

Katowice, Upper Silesia, Dec. 8.—American industrialists interested in coal, iron and zinc who may be anticipating the collapse of German industry and the chances to pick a select line of industrial bargains in the territories allotted to Poland under the London award will do well to reserve their efforts for the time being. Your correspondent has been going through the district for a week, interviewing political leaders and the owners of mines and plants.

I find that many of the local industrial representatives, instead of being panic-stricken and looking for an opportunity to sell at any price, are going ahead with improvements planned before the partition and are adjusting trade arrangements to meet the new conditions, just as if the Danubian sword of forced liquidation provided by the Treaty of Versailles were hanging over their heads.

German industrialists now feel that this section of the treaty will be modified in respect to the ceded part of Upper Silesia. Even the Polish authorities with whom your correspondent talked seem to appreciate that the maintenance of industry will leave the country more vital to Poland than the exportation of German capital and experience from this region, so it is hinted it may be modified.

It is reported that the big feudal agricultural estates owned by Germans may be liquidated for division into small holdings under the Polish land laws, but the mines and plants will be left under their present ownership. This does not apply to the Prussian State-owned Koenigsheute mines, which I am satisfied the Poles have contracted to deliver.

French to be operated by a combined Franco-Polish company.

English and French experts, already on the ground, are sounding out the owners of private establishments. But your correspondent has seen no evidence of outright sales by the owners. In many cases they would welcome the participation of foreign capital, except France, as an element of political protection. But the participation is not offered on bargain terms. The owners and technical men in many cases are planning to remain on the ground and obtain Polish citizenship.

The future may, therefore, be regarded in a fairly pessimistic light. Unless Warsaw runs amuck, there will be no collapse for the present.

Lloyd Leahey Badly Injured

While Coasting on Watson Street, West St. John, He Had Right Leg Cut to the Bone.

London, Dec. 8.—(Canadian Press Cable)—The Manchester Guardian says that most observers, knowing the capable way in which Mr. Melghen had put forward his country's point of view in world councils, would, at least have expected his return for his own seat. The Progressives are the next largest party to the Liberals, the Guardian says of the plans in the Liberal programme, on which official liberals will temporize, but the old allegiance is hard to destroy.

France May Agree To Reduction In The Reparations

Are Awaiting Reply to the Allied Demand, and Expect Germany Can't Pay.

Paris, Dec. 8.—Up until the hour when the diplomatic offices close, France had not heard a word from Germany about a moratorium. Official France is still floundering around in doubt and apprehension, with no official request either from the Berlin Government or from London, where undoubtedly the postponement plan originated. It is believed, however, that Berlin will forward a request for a moratorium in the same communication with which it will reply to the recent note from the Reparations Commission reminding Germany that heavy instalments are due in January and February. This expected communication is exactly what France is waiting for, and from expressions in the newspapers there will be few Frenchmen surprised when Germany admits she cannot pay. In fact, a moratorium is so generally accepted that economists and many liberal writers bar the political aspects and urge a discussion on how Germany can be let off with the least disturbance to the Allied finances.

Gustave Herve, in the Victoire, says: "The first condition is that a moratorium be offered to the German in exchange for a promise that she will print no more paper marks to inflate their currency; that an Allied representative sit in the Reichsbank to control this essential detail."

"The second is that with a minimum delay of one year the German Parliament should vote a fiscal programme, realising an equilibrium of its budget."

"This moratorium, after all, will only complete the difficulties. There is one solution only—it is the immediate reduction of the German indemnity and the compensation for those Allies worst hit by the war."

Young Negro Sailor Dead On Beach

Rupert Clarke of Barbados Reached Shore at Red Head and Died of Exhaustion.

The body of the young negro found early yesterday morning on Battery Beach, Red Head, by Fred Whipple, has been identified as that of Rupert Clarke, of Barbados, a member of the crew of the schooner Hiram D. McLean. The commander of the schooner, Captain Livingston, reports that on Wednesday evening about six o'clock, Clarke rowed the mate and steward of the schooner ashore, and as the two former had permission to spend the night on the beach, Clarke if they had not come back by 10.15 he could return to the vessel.

It is supposed that when they did so return at the hour mentioned, the deceased started to row to the schooner but lost his way and went down the Bay instead. It is thought he may possibly have seen the shore and despairing of rowing the boat in started to swim and just managed to reach the beach. The boat has not yet been found.

The body was brought to Fitzpatrick's undertaking rooms. Coroner Porter viewed the body and after visiting the scene of the finding of the body decided that an inquest was not necessary as there was no evidence of foul play and the shipmaster was going to make an enquiry into the matter.

M., St. John Advertising Club and St. John Garrison Sports and Entertainment Association, representatives of various clubs, prominent professional and business men, and a large number of military officers.

The Paris Trial Proved Expensive

Bills Amounting to $1,278.10 Were Considered by Municipal Council Who Want More Information.

The finance committee of the Municipal Council seemed of the opinion that something had been put over on them in the bills for the second trial of John Paris, and they want more information before passing the bills for payment.

The bills, amounting to $1,278.10, were considered by the council and after some discussion the council secretary was instructed to ascertain from the Attorney-General whether, in allowing the witness fees, he had had vouchers for the amounts allowed and on what basis the witness fees were allowed. Fred Henderson was allowed $100, Alonso Bagnel $45 and William Capson $1.50. The committee was advised that witnesses are allowed their actual expenses, not to exceed ten cents per mile, and the question arose in their minds as to why Capson, who is employed by the C. G. R., was allowed railway fare.

Another Boycott For Wales Among The Possibilities

Calcutta Uprising Planned Christmas Eve at Arrive Prince.

London, Dec. 8.—Apprehension felt over the possibility of an outbreak of the boycott movement in Calcutta, where the Prince of Wales is due to arrive on Christmas evening according to a despatch to the Morning Post from Calcutta.

While the Indian Government measures to suppress the "hartal" (the movement is called), synchronizing with the Prince's arrival in Calcutta have been temporarily effective, feared that the trouble has only "driven under the ground." The respondent says extremists openly declare that another "hartal" is on which will smash over the Prince himself. The Government's program of open agitation, says the patch, has led to more intensive propaganda with violent language more occur, caucuses and institutions.

The Prince's visit to Calcutta is timed to coincide with the greatest society race meeting to be held in the city, the Christmas New Year's. It might almost be that the Government of India is transferred to Calcutta for that purpose, says the Victory and other Government officials from parts of India unwillingly stated, might furnish the setting for the which the Post's correspondent fears.

Former Divinity Student Raked In Divorce Act

Wonder Expressed That Defendant Was Spared in "When Real Men" Was Killed.

New York, Dec. 8.—In the opinion of Vice Chancellor Fielder of New York, one of the great mysteries of life is that the lives of "real men" were taken on the European battlefields, while those of "phony" divinity students, of 119 North Street, defendant in a divorce action before him yesterday, was spared permission to return home without a Chancellor Fielder's remarks contained in an opinion given in missing the action brought against Adams by Mrs. Frances Louise Adams of 152 Schenck Avenue, Brooklyn. He ruled that she had not established the fact that she ever was legally to Adams. Such promissory under the New Jersey law in all divorce actions, but Mrs. Adams could offer only the story of a handwritten contract.

The young woman said she Adams in March, 1914, and would visit him at Camp Dix the following month. She testified they wanted get married but could not find a clergyman to perform the ceremony. Mrs. Adams said she had a husband in the Vice Chancellor's opinion, she had not received a wedding decision.

"I have no respect whatever for defendant," he stated. "He testified he had been a theological student, his letters abound in religious quotations and phrases. In this correspondence he clearly called upon God to witness his love for her. It is on the inscrutable things of this life the God whose name he used to such frequency should spare him the battlefield and take instead his life."
