In February last, Mr. L. Washburn found a fur cap on the road, and, after trying to find the owner in his neighborhood, placed an adv't in the Re-porter. Last week the Reporter brought the loser and finder together, the former proving to be a Westport druggist. He had attended the Westport Athens hockey match, bringing with him a second cap, presumably, for fear that if Westport won he would throw his cap up so high that it would never come down, or that the cap he wore here would not be large enough to wear home. However, the way the match turned out, one cap proved suf-ficient for all purposes and the other fell by the wayside.
