prostrate on the brink of the pool.
Presently the figure came to the posture of all fours. The face turned upward, and the motorist caught the glint of a monocle.
Then the face turned again to its quest.

"Are you looking for something lost?" asked the man in the car.

"Yes," was the reply. "Very much lost."

"When did you lose it, if it's not an impertinent question?"

"Not in the least," answered the other cordially. "I didn't lose it at all."

"Ah!" The motorist smiled.
"When was it lost, then?"

Across the monocled face passed a shadow of thoughtful consideration. "About four million years ago, I should judge."

"And are you still looking? I perceive that you are an optimist," said the elderly man.

"Just at present I'm a limno-logist."

"Pardon me?"

"A limnologist. Limnology is the science of the life found on the banks of small bodies of water.
It is a fascinating study, I assure you. There is only one chair of limnology in the world."

"And you, I presume, are the incumbent?" asked the other politely.

"No, indeed! The merest amateur, on the contrary. I'm humbly hoping to discover the eggs of certain neuropterous insects. We know they lay eggs; but how they conceal them has been a secret since the first dragon-fly rose from the first pool."

"Ah! You are an entomologist,
"To some extent."

"So was I, once—when I had more time. Business has drawn my attention, though never my interest, away from it. I've entirely dropped my reading in the last year. By the way, were you here in time to witness the swarm of antipos last month? Rather unusual, I think."

"No, I missed that. What was the feature, specially?"

"The suddenness of the appearance. You know, Helmund says that—"

"Pardon me, who?"

"Helmund, the Belgian."

"Oh, yes, certainly. Go on!"

The stranger went on at some length. He appeared to be an interested rather than a learned student of the subject. As he talked, sitting on the step of his car, from which he had descended, the other studied him, his quiet but forceful voice, his severely handsome face, with its high brows, harsh nose, and chiseled outlines, from which the eyes looked forth, thoughtful, alert, yet with the gaze of a man in pain.
Presently he said courteously:
