

It Pays to Buy Good Tractors

Westola, Colo., July 5, 1916.

J. I. Case Threshing Machine Co.,
Racine, Wisconsin.

Gentlemen:

I have had the Butts boys doing some threshing for me recently, with one of your small Case 24 inch separators, and one of your Case 20-40 gas tractors. I was well pleased with the work of both, but especially so with the work of the tractor. They could run it day after day without ever a particle of bother. I would like to have some of your literature on this tractor, as I am badly in need of a tractor for farming, providing I could get one that would work like theirs does.

I bought a _____ a little over two years since, but never have been able to get anything out of it. There has always been something wrong with it---if not one thing, then another. I have tried in every way to get them to make it work, and they have had not less than seven men here to work on it, but all to no purpose. It is a 65 horse engine, but one burro could do more work, if worked on as much as this has been.

I want a tractor to farm with---disc and plow, etc. I farm from 600 to 1,000 acres, with teams, but can't get help anymore.

Hoping to hear from you, I am
Very truly yours,

(Name furnished upon request.)

CASE Tractors are popular tractors with the wise farmers. The excellent materials and good workmanship that are built right into them assure the buyer of real quality.

Then, too, there's more than mechanical sturdiness in Case Tractors. The simplicity of their design and construction means actual dollars saved to you. Case simplicity saves you time when time is money.

As an example of this very important feature in Case Gas Tractors, note how easily you can get inside the crank case. There are no important parts that you have to remove and adjust in replacing. All you have to do is to remove the cast iron cover which is within easy reach and on top of the crank case. Compare this with some other designs of tractors.

We haven't space here to point out to you the many more Case features. Write for literature giving in detail the reasons why Case Tractors have won acknowledged supremacy on farms large and small. It will be sent to you on request.
