

BRAMWELL BOOTH TO SALVATION ARMY

New Leader Issues Manifesto--Will Follow Dead Leader's Example.

Late General Now Lying in State--Touching Tribute From Queen Alexandra.

London cable: In a message to the Salvationists throughout the world, published in the Daily Chronicle today, General Bramwell Booth, the new Commander-in-Chief of the Salvation Army, indicates the direction of the Army's coming activities. He speaks confidently of its future, and sends to the millions, whose spiritual direction he has assumed, a battle cry to inspire the future. After a tender and beautiful tribute to his father, the new General says: "The Army's reorganization and achievements are the outcome of God's spirit. That spirit cannot die. It still vivifies us. Yet, though the spirit does not change, the forms and methods in which it is clothed must change. New methods must be employed, and new channels of activity opened, to keep pace with human advancement."

"It was the late General's great joy that he had created a body into which he had breathed a living soul. The outward body might alter, but the spirit is enshrined in the spirit of charity and compassion and self-sacrifice, and cannot be crushed. "It is my ambition to preserve and foster that spirit. Despite the materialism of the age, there is a new and growing yearning for a more ideal and spiritual life, which is acting as a recruiting agency for the Salvation Army."

Asked whether the Army still would be governed on military lines, the General replied that no doubt would, because military discipline gives a tremendous cohesion of simplicity and power to the organization, of a similar kind to that displayed by the Roman Catholic Church. Referring to the world-wide influence of the Army, the General says: "The Army is still among the lowest strata of society, and he has great hopes of winning a way among the working classes."

The General also sees immense fields for activity in the service of foreign and colonial governments, especially among the criminals and the tribes of India.

He thinks there is great room for an extension of work among all the suffering people in America, and he believes that an immediate step should be taken to open a campaign in China, for which, however, money is needed, as the prejudice there against foreigners would make the ordinary method of sending officers about the country ineffectual. He adds: "We must rely on taking control immediately and treating them in a central organization."

Speaking generally, Bramwell Booth confesses that he would rejoice in the decline of the Army if the spirit left it. In this regard he says:

"I should, in brief, be for not keeping dead things above the ground."

"The General has great sympathy in the demand of the poor for better wages and the higher conditions of life. Among his own pet schemes is one to help the poor widows with small children of the country in homes before coming to the workhouse. Referring to the world-wide expressions of sympathy, he says he does not believe that his father, in moments of highest inspiration, could have hoped for anything so beautiful and spontaneous. "I am deeply moved and inspired thereby," General Booth says, "and to my soldiers I will say, in conclusion, let us honor Christ and live to save."

LYING IN STATE.

The body of the late General William Booth lay in state today, and the occasion produced such a display of sincere respect from all classes as has probably never been seen. All nations and all creeds were represented among the many thousands of people who paid their last tribute to the great evangelist.

Even before dawn, despite a pouring cold rain, thousands were waiting in front of Congress Hall, Clapton, in the southeast of London, where the body had been conveyed from the late General's private residence. Before the general public was admitted, however, a large number of personal friends, public officials and high officers of the Salvation Army came to pay their last respects. Then from ten o'clock onward a constant stream of humanity, unchecked throughout the day, filed into the hall. Many of whom worked miles to pay their last respects to the General.

Shoulder to shoulder with them were fashionably dressed women, who desired to pay their homage to the great dead Christian leader and uplifter.

The usual signs of mourning were not visible. Flying over the great hall, the top of a tall flagpole was the Salvation banner with "Blood and Fire" upon it. Draped above the doorway was a Union Jack and a German flag, supported on each side by the Stars and Stripes of the United States and the Rising Sun of Japan. Except for Salvation Army flags, there was not a banner in the hall.

The plain, handwood casket was covered with a pall made of the Salvation Army coat of arms, which supported, instead of a sword, the dead General's favorite Bible, hymn book and famous campaign cap.

The coffin rested on a marble base, underneath a huge canopy of gold and white muslin, draped with red and blue.

Standing at the four corners of the bier, cadets held the flags of Great Britain, the United States, Japan and Germany. All around were bodyguards of Salvation Army officers, wearing red and white bands on their sleeves.

At the foot of the casket stood the last portrait to the dead General, while at its head was a painting of the late Mrs. Booth. The body of the dead missioner was dressed in the familiar frock uniform coat he always wore. It was open to show the red jersey bearing the words "Blood and Fire," the coat of arms of the Salvation Army, emblazoned on the breast. The silvery hair and beard and the waxen face contrasted with the brilliance of the uniform and gave the figure a lifelike appearance.

The crowd, unlike the usual morbid mob which gathers for the lying-in-state of a dead ruler or other prominent personage, displayed great reverence.

ALEXANDRA SENDS CONDOLENCES.

Queen Mother Alexandra today telegraphed to Bramwell Booth as follows: "I beg you and all your family to accept my deepest and most heartfelt sympathy and irreparable loss you and the nation have suffered in the death of your great, good and never-to-be-forgotten father. It is a loss which will be felt throughout the whole civilized world, but, thank God, his work will live forever." (Signed) Alexandra.

Messages of condolence have also been received from King Christian, Denmark; General Louis Botha, Premier of the Union of South Africa; Lord Islington, Governor of New Zealand; Lord Rosebery and many other prominent persons throughout the world.

In connection with the funeral there is under consideration a suggestion that the coffin be conveyed to Abney Park cemetery on a gun carriage as a symbol of the militant character of the evangelist's work.

COUNTRY-WIDE MEMORIAL.

New York despatch: At the stroke of noon on Thursday, the wheels of all industries of the Salvation Army in America will be stopped in memory of Gen. William Booth, whose funeral takes place at a corresponding hour in London.

For four hours, while the impressive services are being held and the cortege is passing through the streets of London, every member of the Salvation Army in this country will drop his task and engage in prayer. Orders to that effect were sent out today from the army headquarters here.

Arrangements were also completed for a memorial service to be held simultaneously in every city and important town in the United States at 3 p.m. on Sunday, September 1. One programme has been drawn up for all of the 870 posts in the United States, and the various commanders have been requested to invite city and state officials, ministers of all denominations and Christians generally to take part in the country-wide memorial.

TELLS SAD STORY

14-Year-Old Girl Found in Bad State.

Toronto report: Charged with assaulting Olive Scully, a girl of 14 years, James H. Rollings, colored, of Lloyd-town, which is near Schomberg, was brought before County Magistrate Clay yesterday by County Constable John Brown. He was remanded for a week in custody. The girl stated that her father was dead and her mother had run away, leaving her alone in the world. The constable found her almost naked, with no stockings or shoes. The house she was kept in was unfit for habitation, and had neither doors nor windows.

Chief Constable Phillips is to start an investigation.

BRAMWELL BOOTH, THE NEW LEADER.

MEN HIGHER UP? $100 FOR SPEECH

New York Civilian to be Indicted.

Becker Has Deposits of $125,000 Now.

New York, Aug. 26.—The investigation of the murder of Rosenthal and of police graft produced this news today. A statement issued by District Attorney Whitman shows that Lieutenant Becker had on deposit in nine banks from November, 1911, to August, 1912, $49,625.75, and that Mrs. Becker withdrew $20,008.15 from eight savings banks on July 31 and August 1, after Becker was indicted for murder.

The record of Becker's deposits in six more Manhattan banks and in three out-of-town banks are being tabulated. It is now estimated that the bank deposits, together with cash known to have been put in safe deposit boxes, will approximate $125,000. In addition Becker put up heavy margins for Wall Street speculation.

The district attorney has established a graft connection between a civilian employee of the police department and an inspector who owed his promotion to the police department to Becker. The inspector had two safe deposit boxes and a bank account, and that the inspector had three bank accounts and a safe deposit box. The withdrawals from the inspector's bank accounts and the visits of the official to his safe deposit boxes tally precisely as to dates. These men and a second unknown inspector will be indicted, it is announced.

The grand jury by a unanimous vote indicted Detectives James C. White and John C. Steinert for oppression and perjury. The evidence showed that they had placed a revolver in Jack Zelig's pocket, and had sworn to a lie before a grand jury. Steinert was placed in the Tombs to night. Detectives were looking for White. Both were suspended from the police department.

Perhaps the single most interesting item of news that flashes today from the district attorney's investigation of the graft side of the Rosenthal case was that the influential civilian employee of the police department named by Burns as one of the triumvirate of blackmail managers has been definitely linked as a grafter to a police inspector whose rise in the department surprised even his friends. Mr. Whitman has discovered that the official, who was represented to the gamblers as being in a position to control the police department, has had two safe deposit boxes and a fat bank account for more than a year, or since the time that Becker began to make the "Strong arm squad" financially useful.

The records of the visits paid by the official to his safe deposit boxes have been obtained from the concerns that rented these private repositories, and the records of his deposits in the bank have been placed before the district attorney. Bank officials have given to the district attorney the records of deposits made in three banks by an account inspector. And there is a record also of the visits he paid to his safe deposit box. The district attorney finds an interesting coincidence in the dates of withdrawals of cash by the inspector from his bank accounts and the dates of the visits of the official to his safe deposit boxes. Mr. Whitman declined to discuss the alleged relations between the official and the inspector, except to say that there was more evidence of a graft connection than a coincidence, and that indictments would be asked for.

KILLED BY NUT

Child Dies While Surgeons Probs for It.

Buffalo despatch: Richard, the sixteen-month-old child of George Ehrenburg, a farmer living in East Aurora, died at the General Hospital yesterday while the surgeons were trying to remove a peanut from the child's windpipe. Upon learning of her son's death, Mrs. Ehrenburg, who was in the next room, nearly collapsed, and had to be given medical attention.

Wednesday the child was playing on the floor and found some peanuts. He removed the shell from one of the peanuts, put it into his mouth and swallowed it. The child's screams attracted the attention of his mother.

The mother found the child lying on the floor gagging, with some peanut shells lying on the floor nearby. The child pointed his finger toward his throat and then lapsed into a semi-conscious condition. Dr. Floyd Richardson, of East Aurora, was called, and said the child had a peanut in his windpipe.

The surgeons did not cut in from the outside, but attempted to remove the nut by probing down the child's throat. The nut could not be removed, and within a few minutes the child died.

A CAUSELESS MURDER.

Shreveport, La., Aug. 26.—Thomas P. Whitehead warned Joseph Dwyer, 18 years old, that he must not brush against Miss Whitehead as she walked along the street, last night. "Oh, you come out to the gate, and we'll talk it over," said Dwyer.

Whitehead walked out from his veranda and was shot dead. Dwyer, in jail, exhibits small concern.

GRADE STOCK

Government to Assist Stock Raising in New Ontario.

Toronto, Aug. 26.—Plans for the building up of a big live stock and dairying industry in Northern Ontario are now being perfected by the Department of Agriculture. This fall live stock improvement associations will be started in all the great northern districts—Temiskaming, Manitoulin, Sudbury and the Fort William section. Any group of twelve settlers may form an association and each one will be given a choice of a high grade bull, two boars or five rams. These animals will be purchased by the Ontario Government from well-known cattle, sheep and hog breeders in older Ontario, the accounts being met by the $5,000 set aside out of the Federal grant to agriculture.

The department has already placed a number of registered Shorthorns on the experimental farm at Monticello, and next spring a high-grade bull will be purchased in the old country. The intention is to raise a fine grade of milkers on the farm and dispose of them to settlers at low prices. This fall a number of hogs will be sent to the farm and later a start will be made with sheep.

HYDRO THRESHING

In addition to the threshing outfit there will be a complete equipment of dairy machinery, grain choppers, pumps, milking machines, washing and cooking apparatus, and various other appliances for the house and the farm.

Hon. Adam Beck will, of course, be on hand as master of ceremonies and Sir James Whitney and other members of the Cabinet may be present.

Mr. Reid stated that the undertaking would mean the development of one of the most important water powers in the country, the falls on the Hamilton River, which are only second in power to those of Niagara, and that two large mills would be built, one at Hamilton and the other at Sandwich Bay, the combined output of which will be 150,000 tons of paper yearly. The bonds of the company will not be placed in the market, and the construction expenditure as well as the increased capitalization will all be raised by private subscription. Mr. Reid is accompanied on his trip by a party of capitalists, among them being C. A. Massey, of the Harvester-Standard Oil Company.
