Oh, merry is the sunshine,
And merry is the spring,
And merry is the bee,
For ever on the wing—
But, Ah! of nature's mirthfulnes.
For perfect joy and truth,
There's nothing half so merry
As the merry days of youth.

There's freedom in the soal
When the life is green and young,
There's rapture in the heart, too,
And sussic on the tongue,
And every step the light foot falls
On groups of the thoraless flowers,
And Hope, a fairy, dancee,
To beguile the pleasant hours.

The merry, merry days of youth,
To-con do they depart,
By worfdly care and sorrow chased
From the impulsive heart,
Yet still will linger in the mind
The seeds of love and truth,
Which the spirit sowed and gathered
In the merry days of youth.

LAUGH AND BE WISE.

The man's a dolt who lets in grief,
When he might ope the door of laughter,
If tears afford the heart relief,
They leave a void for some hours after.
Dull sorry is a malady,
That ends in lunacy or phthisic;
But mirth is nature's recipe,
And laughter is the best of physic.

The kings of old to shan at least
The ill effects of melancholy,
Kept merry folks, to crown life's feast,
With sparking wit and harmless folly:
So Comes rules with buoyant hand—
To mirth turns fear, and pain, and sadne
And sends forth, ringing through the land,
The laughing shout of hope and gladness.

Care, oft indulged, is like a fire
That flames and burns the more you blow it,
Or, like a sexton—wrinkled, dire—
Who digs your grave before you know it,
For young or old—for sage or clown—
For all who live, or may hereafter—
To cure life's ille, or keep them do nn,
There is nothing like a fit of laughter.

SELECTIONS FOR NEWSPAPERS.

SELECTIONS FOR NEWSI'APERS.

Most persons think the selection of suitable matter for a newspaper the easiest part of the business. How great an error! It is by all means the most difficult. To look over and over handreds of exchange papers every day, from which to select enough for one, especially when the question is not what shall, but what shall at the so-lected, is indeed "no casy task." If every person who reads a newspaper, could have edited it, we should hear less complaints. Not unifrequently it is the case, that an editor looks over all his exchanges for something interesting, and can absolately find nothing. Every paper is drier than a contribution box; and yet something must be had—his paper must have something in; and he does the best he can. To an editor who has the least care about what he selects, the writing is the easiest part of his labour. A paper when completed should be one the editor should be willing to read to his wife, his mother, or his daughter; and if he do that, if he gets such a paper, he will find his labour a most difficult one.

Every subscriber thinks the paper is printed for his especial be neft, and if there is nothing in that suits him thus the stopped, it is good for nothing. Some people look over the deaths and marriages, and actually complain of the editors, if but few people in the vicinity have been so unfortunate as to die or so fortunate as to get married the previous week.—An editor should have such things in his paper whether they occur or not. Just as many subscribers as an editor may have, just so many tastes has he to consult. One wants stories and poetry; another abbors all this. The politician wants nothing but politics. One must have something sound. One likes anecdotes, fan and frolic, and a next door neighbour wonders that a man of sense will put such stuff in his paper. Something spicy comes out and the editor is a blackguard. Next ceffics something argumentative, and the editor is a dall fool. And so between them all, you see the poor fellow gets roughly h

THE DULNESS OF HIGH LIFE.—The following passages in the "Memoirs of the Duchess of St. Albans," contain a sad and home truth.—"Few persons have seen so much of the various aspects, I may say of the two extremes of life, as myself; and few persons, therefore, can be better judges of the difference between great poverty and great wealth; but, after all, this does not by any means, constitute the chief and most important distinction between the high and the low states. No—the signal, the striking contrast is not in the external circumstances, but in the totally opposite minds of the two classes as to their respective enjoyment of existence. The society in which I formerly moved was all cheerfulness, all high spirits—all fiss, frolic, and vivacity; they cared for nothing, thought of nothing, beyond the pleasures of the present hour, and to those spirits—all fun, frolic, and vivacity; they cared for nothing, thought of nothing, beyond the pleasares of the present hour, and to those they gave themselves up with the keenest relish. Look at the circles in which I now move; can any thing be more 'weary, stale, flat, and unprofitable,' than their whole course of life? Why, one might as well be in the tread-mill as toiling in the stupid, monotoross round of what they call pleasure, bat which is, in fact, very cheerless and heavy work. Pleasure, indeed! when all meriment, all hilarity, all indulgence of our natural emotions, if they be of a joyous nature, are declared to be irregular. There can be no cordinity, where there is so much exclusiveness and primness; no! all this is coldness, reserve, and universal ennui, even where this starchness of manner is unaccompanied by any very strict manners of conduct. Look, now, at those quadrille-dancers in the other room; they have been sapping, they have been drinking as much champague as they liked; the band is capital; the men are young and the girls are pretty; and yet did you ever see such craving movements—such solemn looks, as if they were all dragging themselves through the most irksome task in the world? Oh! what a different thing was a country dance in my younger days!"

A Portugal paper gives the following statistics respecting married life in Portugal. By what private means the information was arrivlife in Portugal. By what private means the information was arrived at at, we cannot pretend to say:—"There are in Portugal 872,634 married couples, of which the present condition is nearly as follows: women who have left their husbands for their lovers, 1275. Hasbands who have left their husbands for their lovers, 1275. Hasbands who have left their husbands for their lovers, 1275. Hasbands who have left their husbands for their lovers, 1275. Couples who have agreed to live separately, 33,120. Couples who live in open warfare, under the same roof, 132,062. Couples who cordially hate each other, but who dissemble their aversion under the appearance of love, 162,320. Couples who live in a state of tranquil maliference, 510,132. Couples thought by their acquaintances to be happy, but who are not, thomselves, convinced of their own felicity, 192. Couples that are happy as compared with those that are confessed unhappy, 131.
