

The Prayer of Buddy Boy
Little face a-shining-- turned above--
Little hands a-clasping--

The Ring That Wandered
(Concluded)
He wrote me de letters, but I no can read them so Mother Flynn she read, but she cry so much.

Oh, Fader, I miss de Jack so much. When de boys come from de mines, at de evening, I wait for him. After de supper, I go up on de hill, and den birds what screech in de trees, I listen to dem, and think of Jack.

She slipped on her black gloves, and came over to bid me goodbye. She was struggling to hide her emotion, feeling she shouldn't give it too free vent, she the wife of a dead hero, the mother of his valiant children.

That girl Lily, whose ring you gave to me, every night I pray for her. Oh, I am not have such a bad life, with high courage in her air and tone. You see I have always de twin, and then de new baby boy, which come since Jack go.

There was another twist of anguish to the lovely little face at the thought of the we one that soldier father never saw.
But when I can't stand the ache because Jack is go, I grab de twin, and put them on my each knee, and look into their face. The one twin he is girl, the other she is boy. The girl he have mouth just like Jack.

She kissed my hand again, and went to the door, and there passed prettily, looking archly back.
I never forgot you and Lily, dat girl whose ring--You see, Fader, I name de one twin your name. Maybe he be big priest like you, and de girl I name for Lily. Maybe she be grand lady like her!

One baby named for the woman who went astray, the other named for the priest! Things do get twisted so in this old paradox of a world.

All Stuffed Up
That's the condition of many sufferers from catarrh, especially in the morning.
Great difficulty is experienced in clearing the head and throat.

Before The Dawn
Out of one of the first-floor windows of a police station, now inhabited by a company of soldiers, a handkerchief fluttered when the armed guards on the sidewalk had their backs turned.

When I came to, the stars were twinkling overhead. Though my limbs still ached, the old wound had ceased to trouble me. I stretched myself lazily and prepared to rise when a hand gripped me by the shoulder and pressed me back among the heather.

'Don't move,' a voice whispered in my ear. 'There's a patrol on the road just above us.
You're safe here, for a while at all events. Almost as he spoke a rifle shot rent the air. Then a volley rang out a little to the left of where we lay.

'We're trapped I surmised.
'Are there many of them in it, do you know?'
'There are a hundred at least,' he answered. 'I don't think we're in any immediate danger, though. Seems to me they're going to raid the other side of the mountain to night.'

'But why should they assemble on this side for that purpose?'
'The bridges on the other side have been blown up and they're using this side as a sort of base.'

So still the night was that now and again we could hear them moving about on the road fully a quarter of a mile higher up the mountain. Presently, some desolatory firing broke out, and drunken cries filtered down to where we lay. In the lull which followed, my companion raised his head only to lower it again the next moment.

pleasure that I recommend Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. My five children had dysentery last summer, and we tried everything we could think of until a friend advised us to use "Dr. Fowler's." A few doses soon gave them relief. Now I always keep a bottle of it in the house.'
