

An Every Day Occurrence.

Phew—what a hot day! Let's plan a picnic for to-morrow, and get out into the country. We'll get the girls to plan the "Eats", and you phone the British Aerated Water Co for four dozen Kola Champagne. Their's is delicious, a real thirst quencher.

"Right O. I won't get any other, I like their's best. What's the phone number?" 1231.

MUSTN'T TOUCH.
Been down to the art museum and looked at a thousand things. The bodies of ancient mummies and the treasures of ancient kings. Ah! some of the walls were lovely, but some of the things weren't much. But all had a rail around 'em, as all were a sign "don't touch."

Now maybe an art museum needs guards and a warning sign. An' the hands of the folks should never paw over its treasures fire. But I noticed the rooms were chilly with all the jays they hold. An' in spite of the lovely pictures, I'd say that the place was cold.

An' somehow I got to thinkin' of many a home I know which is kept like an art museum, an' merely a place for show. They haven't railed off their treasures or posted up signs or such. But all the children know it—there's a lot that they mustn't touch.

It's hands off the grand piano, keep out of the finest chair, stay out of the stylish parlor, don't run on the shiny stair. You may look at the velvet curtains which hang in the stately hall, but always and ever remember, they're not to be touched at all.

"Don't touch!" for an art museum, is proper enough, I know. But my children's feet shall scamper wherever they want to go. And I want no rare possessions or a joy which has cost so much. From which I must bar the children and tell them they "mustn't touch."

Japan's Royal Ambassador.

The visit of the Japanese Crown Prince establishes a precedent in more senses than one. His Imperial father and the Japanese people could not have shown us in a more striking manner the reality of the alliance between the two island kingdoms than by breaking a centuries-old tradition in our favour and entrusting the sacred person to the half-apparent to our hospitality. Truly East and West may be said to meet when such an accord is established. Following so closely upon the triumphant progress of our own Prince Charles amongst all sorts and conditions of men, the inspiration of the Crown Prince's visit naturally suggests itself. And apparently some of the Prince of Wales' gift for happy phrases making us possessed by Prince Hirohito. Could anything be natter than his reference to our "placidity" in the coal crisis or his description of the Manchester Ship Canal as the capturing of the wild sea and harnessing it for the city's service? The political significance of the visit cannot be over-estimated. It can only mean that the Anglo-Japanese Alliance is to be renewed upon our own terms, and therefore that the peace of the Pacific is guaranteed. For we, on our part, have made it clear that we will have no share in an agreement that might involve the Empire in armed conflict with the United States. This being the case, a renewal of the Alliance can only be taken as an assurance to the rest of the world that Japan will enter into it with the sincerest intention to avoid every source of friction with her mighty neighbour which cannot be achieved by diplomatic negotiation or by arbitration. Such an understanding between the three greatest naval Powers will give practical effect to the ideals of the League of Nations as far as marine warfare is concerned and will remove from the Far East all those elements of danger and unrest to which Japan is so justly exposed than the outlying Dominions of the British Empire.—United Empire.
