As for Charley Wing's boots, tiny and astonishing as are those unequaled specimen's they are but a pair of easy slippers compared with the mental chaussure into which his inner man has put its foot. Like the shirt of Nessus, the latter has raised one continuous bilster over his whole epidermis. Charley's debts and difficulties have reached a climax at which, as he himself says, "man ceases to be a free agent, and is absolved from all responsibility in the great scheme." Not only is the coat he wears unpaid for but the most long-suffering of tailors has declined to present him with another. Not only is he in debt to everybody whom he honors with his acquaintance, but the shillings and half-crowns are beginning to run short, and he has more than once of late expressed a wish that the noble system of credit could be extended to our cab-stands. He is engaged today to dine with a duke (not Duke H.), but he thinks it extremely probable that he may be arrested in his progress across the pavement between the marquis' brougham that drops him, and the arms of the parti-colored glant who will relieve him of his overcoat. Already he is shoulder, which is never practiced save by him who expects an admonitory tap thereon. Already he accepts invitations and makes engagements with a devout air, as of one who is conscious of the uncertainty of human affairs, and jests somewhat plaintively on his probable incarceration, as a mortal may who is pre-As for Charley Wing's boots, tiny and uncertainty of human affairs, and jests somewhat plaintively on his probable incarceration, as a mortal may who is prepared to submit resignedly to the common lot. But he is pleasant and nonchalant, just the same; quizzing old Landless placidly, and discussing the points of Holyhead's hack as unconcernedly as if he could buy up the national debt

These young men of pleasure lavish a good many valuable qualities on a sadly unworthy object. I cannot but admire constancy, endurance and a stoical goodhumor equal to either fortune, even though they be wasted on so foolish and objectless a career as a round of London dissipation, and these Charley Wing must have possessed, or he never could must have possessed, or he never could have borne his reverses so composedly. There was a Spartan's pluck under all that "Persian apparatus" outside, and had his boots been as tight as Cinderhad his boots been as tight as Cinderella's slippers, he would have scorned to go lame in them for a yard.

As Gordon joins the trio, Gilbert Orme appears, picking his way daintily across the Ride, nodding to a dandy here, and bowing to an equestrian beauty there, with considerably more energy than is habitual to him. Whatever twinges may be in store for Gilbert, today he is treading upon air. He is in the first stage of a malady which is fatal to some constia malady which is fatal to some consti-tutions, and a general light-headedness is the result. He sees the world through rese-colored glasses, if, indeed, such are rese-colored glasses, if, indeed, such are to be procured at any real optician's. The motley of the kaleidoscope is to him invested with a magic glamor, and Pelides towers above him in a halo of artificial glory. Why is the grass so fresh today as it waves in the summer wind? Why are the leaves such a golden green as they flicker against the summer sky? Why is that vista of forest glade toward Kensington no longer a mere lobe, or breathing-place of the great metropolis; but a glimpse into Fairyland? Because he has crossed the tiny stream that scarcely wets the wayfarer's feet, and taken his first step into the enchanted taken his first step into the enchanted region. Fair is the path, and pleasant, too, at starting, and all down-hill. The region. Fair is the path, and pleasant, too, at starting, and all down-hill. The breeze is heavy with perfumes, and his tread is upon crushed roses, innocent, it would seem, of thorns! We shall see. Steeper and steeper slopes the hill. By-and-bye, flints cut the tender soles, and there are no flowers in the brake through which he must force his way, but plenty of thorns here that pierce him to the cuick. Faster and faster he must on: The very nature of the spell forbids him to retrace his steps, and he cannot turn aside, for the enchanted country spreads wider and wider around, though it is lone and dreary now, and he shudders to think that if he leave the path he must be lost in the cheerless desert. He cannot stop, for the descent is steeper yet, and he must plunge on ankle-deep in sand and shingle, faint, weary, and athirst, and shingle, faint, weary, and athirst, down, down, through the gathering darkness, wherever the path shall lead him, even to the waters of the Dead Sea. Woe betide him then! falling prostrate in his hot need to leap the wave. Woe betide him! that he must perish at last in an agony of thirst, though steeped to the very nostrils in the mocking flood.

Mrs. Montpellier had found him out directly. Women are so sharp! The vellow barouche was drawn up, according to custom, where carriages most congregate, and Gilbert had been to pay his respects custom, where carriages most congregate, and Gilbert had been to pay his respects to the lively widow. As she watched his shapely figure winding its way through the crowd, she smiled to herself, while she thought with generous triumph, "One of my sex has succeeded in taming wild Gilbert Orme at last. I wonder which of us it is?"

"I saw the yellow barouche, Gilbert," said he. "I knew you couldn't be far off. Do you dine at the Ringdoves' today to meet her? It's a regular case."

Gilbert only laughed. He was always impervious to quizzing, and more so now than usual. With an imperceptible glance at Landless' swollen feet, he took John by the arm and led him off for a stroll up the walk, leaving the gouty sufferer to continue his conversation with his companions. ed the party.

"Is he really going to marry Mrs.

Montpellier?" asked Charley Wing, with a faint glimmering that now he was no r a free agent he had better have so himself.

he was always rather given to brandy-and-water, I fancy, poor fellow, he sel-dom spent a night in his own bed; and she was only eighteen then. What she would do now at eight-and-thirty I should be sorry to contemplate. Perhaps she'd never let him off duty at all. Eh, Charley! that would be a pretty gowouldn't it?"

There was no arguing with old Landless when he got back to his recollec-tions, which, from his antiquity, extend-ed into a remote period far beyond the experience of his companions. Holyhead, therefore, had no resource but to canter therefore, had no resource but to canter off with a snort of disapproval; and Charley Wing lounged away in search of a chair, having discovered, to his surprise, that he was able to pay for it. Bo the old gentleman was left alone in his glory, and the ship-letter, which, indeed, had never been absent from his mind. came before it more painfully than ever. Gilbert and John strolled leisurely up the park, halting every hundred yards to lean against the rails and chat with the mounted throng. Many a fair head bowed gracefully to Gilbert's ready salute; many a taper hand drew the rein a thought tighter, or lavished a dainty caress on the smooth, arched neck before ress on the smooth, arched neck before, in order to pass Mr. Orme in the most becoming manner; and portly papas, jogging alongside these enterprising Amazons, observed: "He's a nice young fellow, that, Bessie; don't let mamma forget to ask him to dine with us on Wednesday!"

Be sure Parale

Wednesday!"

Be sure Bessie remembered, and her mamma didn't forget, for the latter had "always heard Mr. Orme must have ten thousand a year." By-the-way, are there no fortunes in England between "Nothing," "Comfortably off." "Then thousand a year," and a "Millionaire"? Perhaps the income tax commissioners could tell. For my part I have never heard of one. If I wanted to impress a foreigner with the merits of English society. I would take him up this very walk on such a crowded sunshiny afternoon. Our compatriots show to the greatest advantage out of doors; and no woman alive looks so well in a riding-habit as the Anglo-Saxon. There is no such lounge anywhere else in Europe. The Prater at Vienna is a deserted solitude in comparison; and the concourse in the Bois de Boulogne reminds me of a pantomime, without the the concourse in the Bois de Boulogne re-minds me of a pantomime, without the music, that gives life to that fanciful representation. But Rotten Row, which derived from the Route du Roi, is an institution per se, and challenges atten-tion accordingly.

ST. MARYS WON. Those who expected that the London lacrosse team would have a walk-over Saturday because they were playing with an intermediate bunch were sadly mistaken. The St. Marys team's defense was worthy of senior lacrosse, and their home players, although not as fast as the rest of the team, were able to pierce London's defense five times—which is saying a good deal. St. Marys' weak point was in getting away with the ball after a pass.

There was no scoring done during the first quarter. Both did a lot of pretty combination work, but could not get inside the defense. In the second quarter, after ten minutes' play, Graham scored for London on a long combination down the field. Three minutes after that Taylor passed to O'Brien and O'Brien to Graham, who repeated the trick. This concluded London's scoring. In the third quarter the visitors scored three games and in the last quarter they netted two more, winning out by a score of 5 to 2. A small crowd

St. Thomas. July 14 .-- The London funiors came to St. Thomas on Saturday way City twelve. The match, while it resulted in a defeat for the London team, was a good exhibition of lacrosse. A., played here Saturday afternoon, was stubbornly contested at all stages. Brantford won out by six goals to three through superior team work on the home. Twenty-five hundred people witnessed the game and excitement was at fever heat in the early stages, when the wearers of the green looked all-over winners. The Dufferins set out at a tremendous pace, and soon had two goals together. Brantford then steadied down, and the game became very exciting, with lots of close, hard checking. A little lose play gave them their first goal, and before the quarter ended they got another, making the score two all. The second quarter was hard fought from start to finish, and ended with the score 3 to 2 in favor of Brantford. In the third the visitors got two and the and a de—vil of a temper besides!"

"I don't believe that," interrupted Holyhead, who never would let anyone be run down. "I don't believe there's a better woman in London."

ATHLETICS 9, TECUMSEHS 2. St. Catharines, Ont., July 14.—An immense crowd of people witnessed the Tecumseh-Athletic lacrosse match here Saturday afternoon. The weather was superb and the playing of both teams was clean, not a man being ruled off throughout. The game opened with a rush, both teams showing up well, tut the visitors' defense being drawn out allowed St. Catharines to score the first two games in nine and two minutes respectively. The visitors took the third game in three minutes and a half. In the second quarter the Athletics added three goals to their credit. Each team scored a goal in the third quarter. The home team seemed to show their superiority in the last quarter, scoring three goals, while the visitors' playing was ragged and their shots wild. final score was 9 to 2 in favor of the Already there are a great many horses stabled at the track. At the close of the Fort Erie meeting almost 700 horses will be shipped by special train to Highland Park, and as Washington Park, Chicago, will close its gates about the same time, and there will be a letup of a month at the tracks around New York city, while Saratoga is in operation, there will be more horses here to take part in the Highland Park meeting than ever before. ARGREGOR'S VICTORY. Chicago, July 12.-Argregor dissipated the idea that a horse cannot ome from the East a few days before a long-distance race and win, by capturing the Young handicap Washington Park Saturday, beating the best field of horses of all ages that have started in any race at the present neeting. Scarlet Lily, the rank outsider, with Hegelson up, went to the front at the start and reached the stand a length and a half to the good. Rounding the clubhouse turn Ransch spurred Argregor up from seventh to second position, and never dropped back. Swinging for home, Scarlet Lily still showed a margin of a half length over Argregor, and by dint of hard work on the part of Helgeson maintained the lead until within 20 yards of the wire, when Argregor caught her and in the final strides moved away from her easily, winning by a length. Hunter Raine, who hung a bit at the last turn, came again and raced the Lily mare to a nose. The race was truly run and the best horse won.

Buffalo, N. Y., July 13 .- One of the largest Saturday crowds of the meeting turned out at Fort Erie to witness the racing Saturday. The large number of spectators enjoyed one of the best days' sport of the meeting, as the events on the whole were well contested. A good thing was pulled off in the first race, when Fessy F., liberally backed, won the event. Fessy F. was quoted at 20 to 1, and she beat out the

An owners' handicap for 2-year-olds attracted a great deal of attention. All of the four starters were well played, but the race was practically settled in the first furlong, when F. G. Good and Special Tax outbroke their company and opened up a gap of four lengths. Good took the pace from and led Spe-cial Tax by a short margin all of the way to the stretch, where he came away and won by a length and a half. Special Tax finished an easy second and All Souls dropped into third place. The latter came fast in the stretch, and with a better start would have been a keen contender. The other events were keenly contested. Sum-

FAVORITES NOT IN IT. St. Louis, July 12.—Favorites were bowled over in the seven races run at Delmar Saturday, three second choices and four horses at long odds reaping first honors. The Gasconade, a selling sweepstakes for 3-year-olds, was won handily by Helen Print, the favorite, after getting off badly and meeting with considerable interference, besides being compelled to go around her horses. Rounding the turn for home, there was a big bumping match between the leading horses, in which the favorite apparently took no part. Helen Print was pounds the better horse, and she won by a length from Jordan, who was half a length before Father Kentker. The judges decided that Father Kentker and Helen Print were guilty of foul riding, and disqualified them, placing Jordan first, Sambo second and Buccleuth third. Helen Print had been heavily played to win, and her backers were much disappointed at the action of the judges. Weather clear; track fast. Summaries:

BOXING.

THE WEINIG-CARTER BOUT. Sunday Buffalo Courier: Tomorrow night's boxing contest between Al Leicestershire ... 8 Yorkshire11 Weinig, the Buffalo cyclist-fighter, and Kid Carter, the Brooklyn "whirlwind," should prove an interesting affair, independent of the result. These sturdy young gladiators clashed in Chicago Lancashire12 Somerset Derbyshire for six rounds a few months ago and, according to the newspaper reports of the encounter it was one of the live-liest seen in the Windy City for a long time. Carter was awarded the Gloucestershire ...10 decision, although nearly every paper in Chicago conceded Weinig the advantage, and denounced the referee's Hampshire Losses are deducted from wins, drawn decision in strong language. Weinig stoutly declared that he had been the Canadian version of the rules, however. Al's friends do not appear to have so much confidence in him, and as a result Carter is being made the favorite. However, if Weinig boxes half so well in the ring tomorrow night as he does in his daily workouts with his trainers, he may give the supporters of the Brooklyn boy a big surprise. Weinig has been displaying rare cleverness and a shiftiness that is admirable in his practice work. He uses both hands with a snappy, quick jolt and, all in all, shows a vast improvement over the form shown in his contest with Creedon at Fort Erie. We have never seen this Brooklyn chap do battle, but judging by his workouts, combined with his splendid

"Physiciaus did him no good and nothing my wife and I could do did him any good. After your 'Discovery' had cured my cough so quickly, when everything else failed. I wrote my wife to bring him back from the country, she having carried him there to see if the change would do him good. We were living in Savannah, Ga., at the time. She brought him back and after giving him your great 'Golden Medical Discovery' for a time, he entirely recovered."

Respiring

Lungs in your shoes—yes! At every step fresh air inhaled and expelled.

The insole of the RESILIA shoe expands from the outsole each time the foot is lifted.

In doing this it draws in fresh air through a hidden valve in the heel, which locks it in.

When the foot bears down upon the insole, this air, contained in the cross channels, is then forced up into the shoe by the wearer's weight, through insole perforations under the foot.

As the air cannot go out where it came in, it is then compelled to circulate up around the stocking and out at the boot top, keeping the foot dry, clean, hardy, and healthy.

And the dry shoe in winter is the warm shoe, the safe shoe.

The damp shoe, from causes within or without, is the winter death-dealer.

The Year's Derbies.

Some fatality appears to have attached to several of the Derby favorites this year. Including the Epsom event, the father of them all, twelve Derbies have been run so far. Folraces that are dignified by the name: Sombrero was the favorite for the California Derby, and was clearly the the stretch and won by three lengths. Corrigan was second, Water Scratch third and Jingler fourth. Lord Quex was the favorite for the Crescent City Derby. He took the lead at the half, but had to be hustled along at the end to stall off Vassal Dance, second, a length and a half back. Prowl was third, and the others, in best of the field. He took the lead in order named, were St. Tammany, Kaffir, Duke of Connaught, Cast Iron and Merry-Maker. The favorite for the Arkansas Derby was the Bennett colt, Herodiade, at 7 to 10. Prowl took the lead at the threequarters and won by two lengths from Flora Pomona, Huntress third, Hainault fourth, Lingo fifth and Herodiade

In the Tennessee Derby, Abe Frank was the favorite over Lou Woods, Buccleuth and Red Hook, which finished behind him in the order named. Abe took the lead in the last furlong, but he had all he could do to stall off Lou Woods, winning by a neck.

Tom Hayes' pair, Buccleuth and Crimean, were coupled as the first choice, at 9 to 10, in the Cumberland Derby. The Canadian horse, Red Robe, was the first to show at flagfall but Beauchamp took him in hand and laid A. WESTMAN third with him until the last sixteenth, when he sent him out in a drive with

Circus and Buccleuth. He won by half a length, with Circus taking the place by a neck from Aladdin. Crimean was

The favorite for the Kentucky Derby was Abe Frank, at 3 to 5. Alan-a-Dale was coupled in the betting with The Rival. Alan went to the front after a dozen strides, and remained there throughout, showing most speed, but tiring in the last quarter. He won by a neck from Inventor, half a length better than The Rival, a neck in front of Abe Frank, last. The choice for the Latonia Derby was the Baker & Gentry entry, South Trimble and Martin Burke, at 3 to 5. Harry New was first away, but Otis took him back, until he was well in the stretch, where he sent him to the front and won by five lengths. South Trimble was three lengths in front of same distance Martin Burke, the ahead of Abe Frank, last. Red Robe was the favorite for the Canadian Derby. He got away front, but was collared by Dubious in the first few strides. He ran second, within a length of the leader to the last furlong, when the pair drove it out to the limit, Red Robe winning by a length, Dubious three lengths in front of Mattie Spencer, third and last. For the Brooklyn Derby, Major Daingerfield was the favorite, and was much the best. He took the lead at the half and won by ten lengths from Homestead twelve lengths in front of King Hanover, fifteen lengths better than Emshe, last. The favorite for the St. Louis Derby was Abe Cahn's Terra Firma, at 9 to 10. Otis took the lead as they straightened away and ran in front to the three-quarters, where Glenwater showed first by a neck, but he was the speediest in the lot, and in the stretch came away from the field, and won by a length from Little Scout, a nose in front of Terra Firma, a neck better than Aladdin. Flora Pomona was fifth, Corrigan sixth, Leflare seventh, Glen-water eighth and Sambo last. At 5 to 2, the Mackay colt, Heno, was the public choice for the American Derby. Wyeth ran in the bunch until they reached the stretch. There he took the lead from Otis, had clear sailing and won easily by two lengths from Lucien Appleby, three lengths better than Aladdin. Otis was fourth, two lengths back, and the same distance in front of Heno, half a length better than Prowl, two lengths to the good on Belle's Commoner. Pentecost was eighth, half a length back and a neck in front of Corrigan, likewise a neck better than Lord Quex. Arsenal was eleventh, and Hermis last, pulled

Thus it will be seen that five favorites and five outsiders were victorious in ten of the eleven Derbies, and that the other went to the second choice. -"Pop" in Toronto World.
