Four Thousand Years Ago.

An almost priceless series of painted wooden Egyptian models, discovered by Mr. John Garstang, B.Litt., F.S.A., at Beni-Hasan, are on view at the rooms of the Society of Arts in Burlington House. Mr. Garstang spent last winter in opening an extensive necropolis dating from the Middle Empire (2,300 B.C.), and has excavated remarkable evidences of the industrial and domestic life of that period.

The necropolis dates from the time of the highest civilization in Egypt, but, although entombed before mummification a high art, the bodies were in remarkable state of preservation, and on the coffins were models depicting the everyday life of 4,000 years ago. Upon the coffin of one Nefery, a chief physician, was found a great rowing-boat, with twenty oarsmen standing in an attitude of swinging to the beat of two figures seated on a raised platform two figures seated on a raised platform. The model, which is about 24 inches i length, looks as fresh as though it had been constructed yesterday, and the same can be said of other models, which have not been restored in the slightest degree One shows the process of bread-making existing at that time, and still in vogue, another the process of yeast fermentation of beer-making, which has survived without alteration to the present day. In the model of a warship, found in the tomb of a warrior, there is a model f two men seated at a table near the ern, playing a game which looks like

A copy and the bill for the fire stations, with their costly sites and buildings, the fire engines, the other machinery and the horses. All this outlay keeps us poor.

But the loss of life is worse, and it is easy to build fireproof—or better, incombustible—houses, such as in the River Plata countries, and probably in Bethlehem and Nazareth. The manner is as follows: In these countries they neither use the arch iron, but hardwood, which, having mostly to come a thousand miles down the river, is dear. So all the floors and roof, which is flat, are supported by joists shaped as in this country, and across them are laid rails of the same hardwood, about a foot apart, upon which rests the ends on thin bricks, on which another layer of bricks, or sometimes two, is laid in mortar, and on this tiles.

rests the ends on thin bricks, on which another layer of bricks, or sometimes two, is laid in mortar, and on this tiles. Then there is no skirting or paneling. In Britain cement should be used for that purpose, and there should be no boxing of doors and windows, the frame being built in securely. The doors are also of hardwood. In that fine climate no lath or plaster is ever used. In this country the laths should be of iron, and if molding is wanted around the doors it if molding is wanted around the doors it health. Upon entering the builling heald be of cement, instead of dangerous is required to disrobe and deposit his inflammable wood. In such houses a bondire made by piling a lot of sticks and shaving on the best bed in the best bed-bath, and on to a farther room, where room and setting fire to it would not bath, and on to a farther room, where set the house on fire.

The writer has for sixty-four years lived in or been connected with the great city of Buenos Ayres, the capital of the Argentine Republic, and the largest city in the southern hemisphere, with $52,000 inhabitants, and never heard of a life being lost by fire, but there are fires in grocers' shops and such like places, Latterly,, as pine from the United States is now abundant, some builders have used it partially in buildings in the capital, and such are not quite fireproof, but it is a bad practice. At this rate the company is able to clean up over $40,000 a month. The increase in the amount of the cleanup is attributable to greater richness of the ore than formerly, and to the fact that the company is able with experience to get a greater efficiency in the milling facilities.
