

LOCAL MARKET.

Monday, April 20.
It was thought that there would have been an extra good demand for wheat as was offered today, as there was only six loads on the stand, and the supply has been small since last Thursday. The quality of hay offered today was very inferior, which probably accounted for the slow demand. Sales were made at $13 to $14 per ton.
No oats were offered, and there should be an excellent demand for the same at tomorrow's market. One load of straw sold at $3.75.
Mr. McIntyre purchased a car load of live hogs at $6.25 per cwt for select and $4.75 per cwt for fat sows.

One of the daintiest and most satisfying little comedies seen at the Grand in many moons was "We Are King," which played to fair audiences Saturday afternoon and night.

True, there is nothing very original in the story, but it is cleverly unfolded, and it was a clever company which produced it. Mr. Edmund Carroll, in the dual role of the correspondent of the London Record, and the king, proved himself an admirable actor, with plenty of talent and an easy stage manner which took with the audience. His support was excellent.

A SPLENDID SPECTACLE WILL BE THE QUEBEC TERCENTENARY

Brilliant Staff and Magnificent Squadron To Accompany Prince of Wales.

London, April 19.—Arrangements have been completed for the visit of the Prince of Wales to Quebec in July to attend the tercentenary celebrations and inaugurate the monument on the Plains of Abraham, to Wolfe and Montcalm, and the men who fought under them for possession of what is now the Dominion of Canada. This will be the prince's second visit to Canada, the first having been nearly ten years ago, when returning from his world tour he visited all the chief towns and also spent some time fishing and hunting in the Northwest. This time, however, he will go no farther than Quebec, and his stay will not be extended over a fortnight.

The prince will cross the Atlantic on a fast cruiser, probably the Minotaur, which will be accompanied by another cruiser as an escort. He will leave Portsmouth July 18, and reach Quebec the 23rd.

The British Atlantic fleet will go over in advance of the Minotaur and escort to take part in the celebration and give a fitting welcome to the prince to the throne. His royal highness will be accompanied by a brilliant staff, so that none of the pomp and ceremony of the British court will be missing.

Among the staff will be Sir Francis Hopwood, permanent under secretary for the colonies, who of all men in England probably knows more about the colonies, and upon whom the Canadians at least rely when dealing with the mother country.

French and American squadrons also will be at Quebec, and invitations have been sent to France and to all the colonies to send delegations to take part in the celebrations. Australia has accepted and will be represented by Lord Dudley, the new governor-general of the commonwealth. Brouages, in the Charente Inférieure, the birthplace of the explorer, Champlain, has been asked to send a representative, as also have the families of General Wolfe and Montcalm, Levi J. Murray and Simon (Lord) Fraser, who performed deeds of valor in the taking of Quebec.

The prince on landing July 22, will be received by the governor-general and will be presented with an address by the Dominion Parliament. On the 23rd the scene of the landing of Champlain will be reconstituted, and the old navigator shown arriving with a crew in a replica of his ship. The fetes will then be formally opened by the prime minister in a speech, to which Sir Wilfrid Laurier will reply. The programme for the following days is:

July 24—Dedication of the battlefield. Military and naval review.

July 25—Review of the fleets.

July 26—Thanksgiving Day. Services in the Roman Catholic and English Cathedrals.

July 27—Naval display ashore by 10,000 sailors. Representation of the bombardment of Quebec by the British fleet and army under Saunders and Wolfe.

July 29—Prince of Wales leaves Quebec.

CAMPBELL-BANNERMAN NEAR DEATH

New York, April 19.—The New York Herald in a special cable from its London correspondent today says:

"I understand that Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman realizes now the hopelessness of his condition, and that no person outside of his family is allowed to see him except Captain Sinclair, his Scottish secretary, and the Archbishop of Canterbury. The latter calls on him almost every day. The prime minister's visits are themselves hints of the painful condition of the late prime minister. He is said to be allowed to sit in his room. This is true, but is misleading. He finds his bed so irksome that he craves to get up, so he is daily lifted from his bed and propped up in a sort of beehive chair, with pillows and cushions. In that position he is little less comfortable and somewhat less subject to heart attacks. There are illnesses in which a sitting position is practically imperative. The late Lord Salisbury, could not, without great risk, be propped up in bed during the final stages of his illness."

DYNAMITE EXPLOSION KILLS NINE

Quebec, April 19.—Nine men were killed by a premature blast of dynamite on the Transcontinental Railway construction at a camp at St. Cagane de Armagh, about 25 miles north of here in Bellechase County.

The dead comprise Foreman Campbell from New Brunswick, an Englishman named A. Hinkston, and seven French-Canadian laborers. Three others were injured.

The victims were all within 20 feet, and four of them were blown into fragments.

PIONEER DOCTOR CALLED BY DEATH

Hugh McColl, M. D., Widely Known and Esteemed, Passes Away.

Dr. Hugh McColl, M. D., a widely known and esteemed physician, died at his mother's home, 46 Asklin street, on Sunday morning, after an illness extending over two years.

Dr. McColl was a member of one of the pioneer Scotch families in Westminister, and was born in that township 64 years ago. For many years he attended the Old Central School in this city at a time when J. B. Boyle was principal, and Nicholas Wilson, G. W. Vanslyke, Rev. Mr. Johnson and Rev. Mr. Bayley were on the teaching staff. Later he studied medicine in New York, graduating from there in 1870. After a three years' course in England, where he distinguished himself, he settled in Lapeer, Mich. He was a skillful physician and surgeon, and had an extensive practice, to which he devoted himself so ardently that in September, 1896, he broke down from overwork. He at once came to this city, where he had been under the care of his mother and sister ever since. Mrs. McColl is now in her 92nd year. Duncan McColl, who was ordained a Presbyterian minister in 1878, and who is since deceased, was his brother. Another brother, John, also predeceased him. Besides his mother, Dr. McColl is survived by four sisters: Mrs. A. Armstrong, of this city; Mrs. J. H. Elliott, of Westminister; Mrs. Isabel Elliott, of Meaford, and Miss Flora McColl, of this city. The funeral, which will be private, will take place to St. Thomas on Tuesday.

Many Londoners and residents of Middlesex County will cherish the memory of Dr. McColl for his sterling personal qualities.

LONG-TERM PRISONERS LEAVE FOR KINGSTON

Noah and Mee Taken by Deputy-Sheriff to the "Pen."

Deputy-Sheriff Watterworth left last night for Kingston in charge of Thomas Noah, the Chippewa Indian, who was recently sentenced to serve twelve years on a charge of murder, and Herbert Mee, the Strathroy embezzler, who was given five years in the "pen."

LINEVITCH DYING.

St. Petersburg, April 20.—The condition of Lieut.-Gen. Linevitch, aide-de-camp to Emperor Nicholas, and former commander-in-chief of the Russian army in Manchuria, who is ill with pneumonia, is now critical, and his physicians have little hope for his recovery, although the aged general has made a hard fight in virtue of his vigorous constitution.

TRAIL LOST AT KELLY'S SIDING

brought to the police station that Moir had been seen at the Grove, a post-office about 3 miles northeast of London.

This was the first definite clue, and as there was no possibility of mistaking the man.

Detectives Nickle and Egelton and Sergt. Gilmour of the Barracks, started in pursuit. All carried Winchester. On arriving at the Grove, the officers found that there was no mistaking the man.

Moir was dressed in the regulation khaki uniform and carried the rifle. He approached Postmaster Robinson and asked for something to eat.

The postmaster had not heard of the tragedy at that time, and willingly gave the fellow some food.

He only remained a few minutes—just long enough to get the food—and then started across the fields in the direction of Wyton, a little village further northeast.

Seen at Wyton.
That was the last seen of him by Mr. Robinson.

Shortly after 7 o'clock, he appeared at Wyton, going to the home of Mr. Moir.

Moir again asked for food, but as Mr. Martin's family had been ill, there was little to be given him, as the latter was practically empty.

"The man is evidently Moir," said Mr. Martin to the Advertiser.

July 26—Thanksgiving Day. He did not have the rifle with him. He did not appear excited or alarmed.

"I did not notice anything unusual about him, and I certainly would not have judged that he had committed murder."

"He had little to say, and after I told him that I was sorry I could not oblige him, he thanked me and went on."

"I understand he then went to the home of postmaster Simon Blake, across the road, and asked him also for something to eat."

"Mr. Blake refused him, as he was suspicious something was wrong. Moir then went down the road at a stiff walk."

"I did not see him any more."

Took Boy's Cap.
The young children of Mr. Bryden, who lives a little further down the road saw him. At that time he had a rifle, and I presume he hid it before coming to my place.

"I also understand he forced a little boy to throw up the road to give him his cap. The boy found the cap of his father, saying that a soldier had taken his cap from him. The cap was a gray-peaked one."

Nothing further was seen of Moir that night.

Sunday Morning.
Sunday morning it was discovered that Moir had discarded the rifle. Two young sons of Dr. Hughes, of Thorndale, who were walking down the track, found a rifle lying on the grass in the ditch. The boys brought it to their father. This was shortly before noon.

"The boys brought the rifle in to me," said Dr. Hughes to the Advertiser. "It is a Ross military rifle, one of the regulation kind. It is evidently Moir's, and was thrown away by him."

The boys found it in both hands of Moir. He has evidently taken to the track and is going north."

Kelly's Siding.
Moir probably passed through Thorndale early in the morning. At 8 o'clock Sunday morning, the next clue was given.

The reason foreman at Kelly's Siding, Mr. Priddis, saw him going north on the railway.

That was the last seen of him, and he is evidently hiding somewhere in the woods or in a barn.

The Chase.
It was not the intention of the officers to rush in upon the man, but rather to pursue him quietly, doggedly, until worn out in both body and spirit by his constant activities, he would be found by the vigilant officers.

The chances for his capture alive are excellent. True, Moir may cheat the officers and commit suicide, but had that been his intention, long before this the offices of the Ross rifle would have ended his mad career.

Threw Rifle Away.
The fact that Moir has discarded the Winchester is much in favor of the officers. It shows that he has been established beyond a question of doubt, and will enable the officers to close in upon their man with less trepidation than otherwise would have been the case.

In a battle with revolvers, Pte. Moir would stand a poor chance with such marksmen as Detective Nickle, Egelton and Sergt. Gilmour.

After committing the crime, Moir evidently took refuge in a barn not far distant from the scene of the crime. Here he rested and possibly slept until well along in the afternoon.

It was not until late in the evening that he was seen at the Grove, and then vanished into the scene of the crime. Since then he has been walking hard and fast, and is making good time.

At Thorndale.
At Thorndale, the detectives discovered that Moir was taking to the railroad, and they secured a handcar which took them to St. Marys.

Moir was not seen along the line by the officers, but it was certain that he had passed along that way, as he had been seen out in both hands of Moir.

At St. Marys many people are out, and it is rumored that he is in that neighborhood.

His capture is now looked upon as merely a matter of hours, even though he has been temporarily lost.

The only direct line of railroad is the Stratford-Sarnia branch, and it is thought that Moir is making towards that in the hope that he may get across the border.

These trains are being closely watched at every crossing, and it is not thought possible that he will get away.

Lost Again.
The police have lost all track of Pte. Moir. He was last seen between Kelly's Siding and St. Marys, on the Grand Trunk, but since that time not a trace of him has been seen. He is probably in hiding in some barn waiting for the night to fall when he will again continue his dash for liberty.

An Advertiser correspondent saw

Detective Nickle in St. Marys this morning, and the latter informed the reporter that he was coming into London, but that the others would continue the man-hunt. He admitted that Moir had been lost sight of somewhere between Kelly's Siding and St. Marys.

Moir is Resourceful.
Moir is displaying great resourcefulness and cunning, and is so far more than a match for the best officers in London.

Several times they have been right upon him, but with marvelous cleverness he has got away when capture seemed inevitable.

In one of the most thickly populated parts of the country, he is covering his tracks with a great deal of success, and in all probability will keep clear of the officers for some hours yet, though his capture is certain.

The tricks Moir learned on the South African veldt are showing themselves, and his clever concealment, and resourcefulness in the face of impending capture are remarkable.

PTE. MOIR WAS DISSATISFIED

wore khaki trousers with a civilian coat.

It was also rumored that he had been seen in different parts of the city, but these as also the Hamilton rumor proved to be unfounded.

Moir was quite well known about town, and was a frequenter of the hotels.

Dissatisfied With Position.
"He was a quiet fellow as a rule," said one of the hotel clerks to the Advertiser, "and very seldom became badly intoxicated. Moir occasionally told me his experiences, and of late seemed to be worrying. His position as orderly to Col. Belton did not suit him, and he complained to me that the work was beneath him, as he did not like taking care of a horse."

"Moir frequently discussed this, and it looks as if he had taken his position to heart. He was always a soldierly chap, and seemed well educated. That may have had something to do with the crime."

"In all probability he had worried about his grievance or fancied grievances that he became desperate, and determined in his madness to get even with those who were the cause of his supposed humiliation."

Fancied Wrongs.
That he kept his fancied wrongs sealed up in his heart against a day of reckoning is evident.

By this he would mutter vague threats against his supposed enemies, but never did he specify against whom his anger was directed.

It was also stated that he had turned a gun on one of his comrades who had crossed him, but the officers in charge know nothing of that.

Had this been reported the crime of Friday night might have been prevented.

HICCUGHS WERE FATAL

John Benson, Hamilton Township Farmer, Succumbed to Attack.

Cobourg, April 19.—Mr. John Benson, of Hamilton Township, is dead as a result of an attack of hiccoughs, which troubled him for some days, and from which he could not get complete relief. The paroxysm seized him the first of April. Before that he was hale and hearty for a man in his 32d year.

Mr. Benson was born in Tyrone County, Ireland, but came to Hamilton Township in 1842, and had been a resident of this vicinity, since. He was one of the staunch men of the township. Three sons and six daughters survive.

CHARLES H. LANG HAS PASSED AWAY

Well-Known Cattle Buyer and Farmer Dead After Long Illness.

Mr. Charles H. Lang, of lot 15, con. 11, London Township, died yesterday morning at Victoria Hospital, after an illness of some duration from a complication of diseases.

The late Mr. Lang was a well-known resident of London Township, having resided on the farm where he was born for 67 years. He was quite successful as a farmer, and of late years he had been dealing in cattle, with marked success. Some months ago he began to fail, but was not thought to be seriously ill until a short time ago.

Deceased was unmarried. He is survived by two brothers—Dr. Hugh Lang, Granton, and John E. Lang, of Kalamazoo, Mich.—and Miss Eliza, at home.

Three other members of the family—James Lang, of London; Joseph Lang, of Silver Peak, Nev., and Mrs. C. H. Robinson, of Muskegon, Mich.—predeceased him.

The funeral will take place from his late residence on Tuesday, April 21, at 1 o'clock. The services will be conducted by Rev. Dr. Munro, of Birt Cemetery.

CONGRATULATIONS TO BRYCE

Canadian Fisheries Treaty Appeals to the Morning Post.

London, April 20.—The Morning Post heartily congratulates Mr. Bryce and his Canadian advisers on the ratification of the Canadian fisheries treaty.

The Times holds out a hope that the British Columbia logging trade will revive, but says that if the boom of the last two years is not revived it will be hard to make anyone regret it. The whole record of the slump makes a less creditable episode than the well-grounded confidence and self-restraint displayed by Canadian financiers in the face of the New York crisis. The Times advises greater competition with the Republican capitalists, and discusses the advisability of careful retooling.

It is understood the contract for the eastern carriage of mails via Canada is completed.

It is announced that a Montreal loan will be issued shortly, at a price of 90c.

East London Happenings of a Day

EAST ENDERS HAD MANY MOIR CLUES

Concerning the Whereabouts of Moir, the Barracks' Murderer.

The disappearance of Pte. Moir, the Wolsley Barracks murderer, gave rise to many rumors in East London, concerning his whereabouts.

This morning no less than a dozen east enders apprised The Advertiser of parts of the city where the murderer "had been seen" Saturday and Sunday.

None of those spoken to had seen him personally, but all had heard of places where he had been.

One man had him walking on the C. P. R. tracks east of the city, while another knew a man who saw him walking towards Springbank.

A customer informed an east ender that Moir had been seen in the neighborhood of St. Peter's Cemetery.

A railway conductor is said to have carried him on his train as far as Toronto yesterday, while a south ender saw a soldier in full uniform, carrying a rifle, proceeding through Chelsea Green to the Pere Marquette Railway, and thence out of the city, on his way to St. Thomas.

People are beginning to believe that Moir has adopted a personality similar to that of the mysterious Rudge, the murderer of Dickens' creation in "Barnaby Rudge."

EASTER IN THE EAST END CHURCHES

Special Music and Special Sermons in Different Edifices.

Special Easter Services were conducted in all East End churches yesterday.

The choirs had arranged appropriate music, and the churches were superbly decorated with Easter lilies and foliage, donated for the most part by the members.

Rev. Mr. Rollins conducted the services of King Street
