Over her eyes that pazed too much, They drew the lids with a gentle touch: With a tender touch they closed up well The sweet then lips that had secrets to tell; About her brow and beautiful face They tied her veil and her marriage lace; They tied her veil and her marriage lace;
And drew on her white feet her white silk shoes—
Which were the whitest no one could major. 'Why how old are you?'

And over her bosom they crossed her dening.

And they held their breath as they left the round in the hands With a shudder, to glance at its stillness and gloom.

But he who loved her too well to dread, He lit his lamp and took the key And turned it—alone again, he and she.
