

In conclusion, Mr. President, I should like to express my admiration for the great integrity and speediness of passage of the Emergency Government. He and his lieutenants, within the limited time by the Constitutional, essential and common interests of their country, and in behalf of the people, and of world peace, have done up a very swift and sure business. They have created this system of emergency government in the interest of the Constitution and welfare of this Organization, in which the public has a great responsibility of action.
I think of the address given by the speaker here, during the session of the National Convention, and the only words of commendation that I remembered to mention at the time were: "The Emergency Government"
"a most important contribution of the American people, and a historic day in our country's history, and I believe that the people of this country will be proud to call it the 'Emergency' Government. I believe that the people of this country will be proud to call it the 'Emergency' Government. I believe that the people of this country will be proud to call it the 'Emergency' Government."

In conclusion, Mr. President, I should like to express my admiration for the great integrity and speediness of passage of the Emergency Government. He and his lieutenants, within the limited time by the Constitutional, essential and common interests of their country, and in behalf of the people, and of world peace, have done up a very swift and sure business. They have created this system of emergency government in the interest of the Constitution and welfare of this Organization, in which the public has a great responsibility of action.
I think of the address given by the speaker here, during the session of the National Convention, and the only words of commendation that I remembered to mention at the time were: "The Emergency Government"
"a most important contribution of the American people, and a historic day in our country's history, and I believe that the people of this country will be proud to call it the 'Emergency' Government. I believe that the people of this country will be proud to call it the 'Emergency' Government. I believe that the people of this country will be proud to call it the 'Emergency' Government."