Caleb West

By F. HOPKINSON SMITH

(Author of "Tom Grogan," etc.)

Second Edition. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"It is a long time since we have met with so satisfactory a book as 'Caleb West.' Readers must go to the book for themselves, and enjoy its pathos, its humour, its rich character-drawing, and its thrilling adventures, as we must confess that we have done."—Speaker.

"The reader will find enough of all sorts to hold his interest to the end. Mr. Hopkinson Smith writes well and carefully, and often charms us with literary workmanship of a really high order."—Westminster Gazette.

"Mr. F. Hopkinson Smith is to be congratulated on having written a really fine novel, which is full of admirable character."—Daily Telegraph.

Dinkinbar

By HERBERT C. MACILWAINE

Crown 8vo, 6s.

"There is good food for thought as well as a right good story in Mr. MacIlwaine's record of 'Dinkinbar.'"—Daily Chronicle.

"Have been much interested in a book constructed on very unconventional lines, entitled 'Dinkinbar,' by Herbert MacIlwaine. I have read a great many stories of bush life, but none that seemed to present it with such vivid naturalness."—Weekly Sun.

"Mr. Herbert MacIlwaine's name is new to us, but in 'Dinkinbar' he has written the best story of Australian bush life we ever came across."—Standard.

In the Shadow of the Crown

By M. BIDDER

With an Introduction by MAURICE HEWLETT

Second Edition. Crown 8vo. 6s.

"Remembering that as a rule historical novels are somewhat dull, and that therefore the reading public is inclined to neglect them, we repeat with added emphasis that in our opinion Mr. Bidder's contribution to this kind of literature deserves a large audience and close attention."—Literary World.

"A very brightly written and coherent story."—Daily Telegraph.

"The author, while giving free play to a picturesque imagination, has succeeded in imparting an air of reality to everything, the romantic atmosphere blending with the truths of history."—Scotsman.
