SOIREE MUSICALE.

Mr. Kundle accepts the call he will Carl Hunter, Tenor, and Assisting Artists Give Pleasing Program.

Toronto have the opportunity of hearing what in its full meaning is properly de scribed as a "soiree musicale," such as was given last night at Conservatory Hall. Mr. Carl Hunter, tenor, was assisted by Miss Heloise Keating, harpist; Mr.

withal displayed a well-trained voice, of pure tenor quality, sweet in the upper register and resonant in the lower register. His tendency is towards emotional interpretation rather than lyric tonality for its own sake—a decidedly sensible aim for any vocalist who wants to be an artist. Mr. Hunter, in my opinion, has a bright future before him, and especially in the class of songs represented by Brahms' "Wie bist du, meino Koenigin," in which, last night, he showed himself a genulne artist. He was equally successful in two early Italian songs, by A. Scarlatti and Monteverde, and in the Liebeslied (Siegmund), from Wagner's "Walkuere." He was justly encored for the Scarlatti, "Sento Nel Core."

Mr. Hahn, 'cellist, did not seem to be able to play in tune; however, he may console himself with the fact that even Alvin Schroeder sometimes displayed the same fault. Mr. Hahn's artistic powers appeared in his rendition of A. Nordhelmer's "Reverie," and Schubert's "Wiegenlied," which technically were excellent, but his tone lacked cantabile quality.

The first encore of the evening was scored by Miss Heloise Keating, harpist, and it is not beyond the truth to say that she is easily at the head of virtuoso harpists in Canada. The Keltic strain in her makes her poetic, and with the harp what else could result other than delicate and pure beauty? She has the temperament for poetic interpretation, and the technic which made a fairy loveliness of August Dupont's "Ballade," and Saint-Saen's "Fantaisie."

Mr. Hunter may congratulate himself and his assisting artists on having given a genuinely delightful "soiree musicale."
