The Kind You Have Always Bought In Use For Over 30 Years. THE CENTAU COMPANY, 77 MURRAY STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

THE BOY A HIS MOTHER. The boy's training begins with his birth. We know how quickly the baby forms habits, and how hard it is to change them.

Too many foolishly-indulgent mothers ignore or laugh at little naughtinesses in the young child, and in a few more years well-defined, strongly-rooted bad habits that they may be perilous to eradicate.

One of the strongest influences for good that a mother can wield is to teach her boy to confide in her. This will be easily done if commenced in time, and with his heart constantly open to her loving sympathy the dangers of impure and alluring associations may be chased away and its purity remain unimpaired.

The strictest regard for the truth should be inculcated in the boy's mind from his infancy, and cheerful obedience be given because of his faith in his mother's sympathy and justice.

Let the mother always sympathize with her boy and show it! Share his joys, his ambitions, his disappointments and his sorrows. All the way up the scale of life from the time when he crosses the line between youth and young manhood and comes to tell "Mother" of a sweet new love, she should make him feel that she is his most sympathetic friend and his best counsellor.

Not only is "Etnal vigilance the price of peace," but of success in boy-training as well. One can not "take it easy" for awhile, and then tighten the reins again without great risk. The few days in which the boy has been unguarded freedom may have given him his undoing.

The standard of morality for him should be the same as for his sister, and he should be taught to shun the evil and impure temptations that will sooner or later besiege him, just as carefully as his sister is taught.

Not foolish modesty should prevent this, for there is no subject too delicate for the true mother to discuss with her son. Instructed from the time she warms his against the special vice of lawlessness, and impress upon his mind and conscience the necessity for a pure life in men as well as in women there will be a deeper reverence for her and a closer heart-union.

I hardly da allow myself to start in on the subject of drinking and smoking because of an ungrateful that there seems no end to it.

It may be possible for some persons to drink and not become drunk, but no boy or man knows when he drinks his first glass what the final result may be. Intellectual, refinement, education and wealth all fail to save him if there happens to be slumbering in him a natural love for intoxicants.

And simply a boy and man has become a drunkard simply because he was a genial "good fellow," and could not withstand the desire to make himself pleasant, or the fear of his friends' ridicule.

Many mothers are careless and thoughtless about these things. Perhaps the husband drinks with her perceptible enjoyment so she reasons that a little beer or wine will not hurt her boy.

Or she asks, "How can I keep my boy from smoking, when his father sets the example?" It will be hard, of course, but it can be done. A mother may explain the physical danger, the uselessness, the extravagance of the smoker, and she may appeal to her son's chivalry by pointing out the selfishness of a habit that inflates vile odors on others who detect them.

And she may do this without especially censuring "father," who is a confirmed smoker, but rather lament the fact that when he was a little boy he was not taught the evils of such a habit.

The world is full of whoresome, clean and beautiful things to instruct and entertain the unformed mind if they are properly guided.

Teach the boy to love Nature, to become acquainted with her children—the birds, the bees, the insect world, the animal kingdom; the flowers, the trees, the stones, the river, the skies, in fact the whole of this wonderful and lovely world, and he will never lack for companionship or innocent amusement.

Hot-Water Bags. The efficacy of hot water in inflammatory conditions can hardly be overrated.

To a limited extent its value has long been known. Our mothers and grandmothers made use of woolen cloths dipped in hot water in some forms of inflammation.

At present the worth of this remedy is almost all forms of pain is generally recognized by the medical profession.

Hot-water bags are not convenient of application in many cases. They are apt to wet the clothing and a tatty soon cool and require repeated dipping. The rubber bag is in every respect superior.

Once brought to the proper temperature the heat is long retained; it is neat, and in every way easy of application.

Every family in the country, as well as the city, should have at least one ready for any emergency. Says the Medical Mirror.

As a profession, we do not sufficiently appreciate hot water bags. The amount of comfort in one of them cannot be known except from actual experience.

There should be, if possible, half a dozen bags of various sizes in the sick room, every of access and ready for use.
