Old British bombshells are being brought up in the Stonington, Conn., harbor.

A destructive freshet washed away the corn patch of a Wisconsin farmer and laid bare an almost inexhaustible lead mine.

Mrs. Lyster, of Indiana, was lately buried in her linen wedding garments, which she spun, wove and wore seventy-three years ago.

There ain't no trusting an Indian; And when he's done with his bad, He's a-doin' 'tween you and his bad.

The fashionable ladies of New York wear amulets such as petrified toads, snake rattles, etc., as averters of evil.

The young men will have to wear reptiles upon their heads to keep pace with the new movement.

Three young Dutchmen from Friesland, Holland, are looking over the territory of Minnesota to find a suitable spot to colonize several hundred of their countrymen.

As they can find a "freeze-land" in almost any part of the State they will doubtless feel very much at home.

The St. Louis Republic says that Tom Worrell, a waiter in the Metropolitan Hotel at Omaha, has been raised from mental servitude to aristocratic affluence by the death of a kind old uncle who died and left Tom a fortune of $150,000.

A Georgia editor describing a wedding lately, said the bride "looked a very lively, crackled in the golden glimmer of some evening lake—a foam sleek, snowy, yet sun-flashed, crowning the ripples of some soft Southern sea."

That really so, the bridegroom must have been very much puzzled to know whether he was wedding a sublime conservatory, or an Aurora Borealis.

It is wholly in the interest of science and with no spirit of ungallantry, that we venture to mention the peculiar tastes in pets said to be shown by the refined ladies of America.

In Louisiana, it is with small alligators that they ornament the house, and all their houses; in Wisconsin, the globular turtle is deemed sweetest and dearest; in Tennessee a love for lizards prevails, while in Arkansas select snakes are the fashion. It is perhaps unnecessary to observe that in other regions that taste and pleasant animal, the Domestic Cat, is often a favorite.

Two colored men at Mansfield, Pa., lately amused themselves by saturating a Newfoundland dog with coal oil, and then setting fire to the poor beast. Wild with terror, after running some time in the open air, enveloped in flames, the poor brute took shelter under a dwelling-house. The building soon took fire, which was only extinguished after cutting down a portion of the floor. A woman, who at the time was very sick, was so badly frightened by the dog's screams that she fell from the fire that she was thrown into convulsions, and it is expected that she cannot recover. The poor dog was literally roasted alive.

The thriftiness of Mrs. Weller, whose first husband's garments so fortunately fitted the older Samuel, is equaled if not surpassed by that of a widow of Portland, in the county State of Maine. Perceiving that her adopted daughter's silver collar plate was lying about generally in the way, and desiring very much a pair of handsome new gold-brooches, she invited a passing peddler to a bazaar of the same. Leaving the room for an instant she was shocked on returning to find that lovely collar-plate and the merchant alike gone. Her frantic grief was something too sacred to dwell upon. The police, however, recovered the silver collar, and her excitement, if not her happiness, is restored.

Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, at the Friday night prayer meeting of Plymouth Church, made answer to the criticisms of Dr. Curry, which charged him with holding an injury to the cause of morality in his preaching and dispensing an "emancipation of theology; a Christianity without a Christ."

Mr. Beecher's answer was a profound thinker on the founder of a system. He preached to save men, and during his whole ministry Christ had been the starting point of his preaching, and he preached not the divinity of Christ, which he believed, and the atonement which he also believed, but he had preached Christ as a present Saviour—a manifestation of God, and this with many variations, and he would appeal from Dr. Curry's bad informed, to Dr. Curry's better informed. Concerning the deterioration in the Methodist ministry, for which Dr. Curry made him responsible, as well as the weakness of the common run of preachers in general, Mr. Beecher said: "The trouble with the preachers is the want of adaptability to their circumstances, not the popularity of one preacher. Some men like to talk with their preachers. They like to ask such questions as 'What do you think of Balaam's ass speaking—do you think he did so?' And about Daniel. Daniel is a momentous subject with some people. They want to know who Cain married, too. I once put an article in the New York Ledger on this subject. I received a hundred letters about it. If I had put an article in on the proper conduct or Christian behaviour of men, I would have had a letter on the subject. This was curiosity. But what men want is intelligent curiosity—something to raise them up, to instill better and higher thoughts."

Mrs. GEO. WATERBURY'S

Celebrated Dinner Pills.

A SURE REMEDY FOR Indigestion, and all Bilious and Liver Complaints.

Made by her daughter, Mrs. R. H. LESTER. Sold by Druggists generally.

THE above PILLS having stood the test over forty years, and being prepared with great care and study, nothing else or injury being offered in their composition, are perfectly safe to administer to the most delicate constitution. They never reduce the patient; no cessation from his usual or any unusual change is ever necessary. They never reduce the patient's strength, but rather increase it, and they are the most delicate and safe of all medicines.

They are sold by the following Druggists, and by the most respectable Grocers and Dealers in the city.

What may seem almost incredible is the fact that these pills have cured many of the most obstinate cases of indigestion, biliousness, and liver complaint, and have been found to be the most reliable and safe of all medicines.

At the sale of the royal yearlings, bred by Her Majesty at Hampton Court, Mr. W. L. Crawford, the owner of Gan Forward paid the largest price, 1,150 guineas, for a colt by young Melbourne—sister to Little Lady. A colt by the same horse—Bay Cella (brother to the Earl) fell to Lord Londale's bid for 1,000 guineas. About thirty-four in hand and a very large audience were present, the prices fetched being above recent averages.

In Arizona editors are treated by the public with great consideration and liberality. The conductor of The Record, published there, has received two invitations to act as second in a duel, another to an Indian hunting raid, a pair of bear-skin pantaloons, a three-pound nugget of silver, two lottery tickets, a free pass on a stage route, three Apache scalps, a call for the execution of a man, and a copy of the sentence of death pronounced upon another for horse stealing, and on two more for burglary, while a fifth, convicted of manslaughter, escaped easily with a fine of ten shillings. This is not so very much money for a newspaper editor.

There is a magnificent opportunity for Darwinians at Reunion Island, if the English Consul's report of the affairs there is to be believed. The laziness of the population equals that of the famous island of the West, who could not make up his mind to do anything, and contributed to continue his existence not being killed. The few descendants of the former population of Reunion, who have been driven to the mountains, and there just manage to live by planting small plots of maize, and by hunting in the forests for charcoal. Their wretched degradation is such that the opinion is expressed by the natives, that the lower classes, in the third generation, their arms, and their tools become the arms and tools of succeeding generations will reach the Darwinian—interesting fact of being gradually developed into the gigantic malign or Lemur of Madagascar.
