TUESDAY EVENING, SEPT. 2, 1873.

The Queen to be Petitioned.

Our Ottawa special, like the last we received, was a day and night coming.

Well, this is a little faster than steam.

It intimates that the Opposition, not content with having dragged the Governor General into their fight for office, are plotting to drag the Queen into the same ditch. They are going to petition

Her Majesty to direct the Governor General to summon Parliament, in case the expected early meeting of Parliament is prevented by the obstacles thrown by the Opposition in the way of the Commission appointed to prepare evidence for Parliament to take into consideration. These tactics would be in accordance with those employed in the second inquiry into the Huntingdon clanor for inquiry, manage by different methods and on various pretexts to postpone inquiry, and then clamor loudly again for inquiry. They prevented it in the first instance by halting on instancing the Commission unconstitutionally, in the second instance by refusing to accept for the Committee power from the Executive to swear witnesses, and in the next instance by refusing to appear before the Commission with their witnesses. And every time they have charged the postponement to the Government, and have turned around and clamored anew for what they had just succeeded in defeating. Having placed the Governor General in a position that compelled him to make himself, or the other of the great parties of the country, they are contemplating making an effort to force the Queen into the same disagreeable position. They should be ashamed of themselves. It is the old Tory doctrine that the Crown shall interfere whenever the Crown deems interference necessary. These politicians, witnessing the boundless surrendry with which many of the Opposition have pursued to date, are now advancing a constitutional course, should hesitate before subjecting the Queen to the same treatment. Canada must work out its own salvation in this matter, according to the principles of Responsible Government, and not involving the Queen in the interference of the Crown.

much either way. Many of them show on their face that their authors were using a text for writing down something in England, and, as is the manner of those who deal with texts, our affairs were made to wear any aspect that suited the writer's main purpose.

A Keokuk, Iowa, lady, who engaged countered a mouse in the flour barrel

Now, most ladies under similar circumstances would have uttered a few feminine shrieks and then sought safety in the garret. But this one possesses more than the ordinary degree of female courage. She summoned the hired man and asked him to get the shotgun, call the buldog and station himself at a convenient distance. Then she climbed half way up stairs and commenced to punch the mouse vigorously with a pole. Presently the mouse made its appearance and attacked the lady. The lady fired and the mouse fell down the stairs, and the hired Board of Health-Supervisor Conard on Trial-Olfactory Evidence.

An interesting and novel trial commenced yesterday afternoon at the Board of Health, office. Road Supervisor Conard, of the town of Portland, was summoned to show cause why he has placed a quantity of dirt, rubbish, filth and offensive matter on the Bridge Road.

The facts of the case are that Mr. Conard is repairing and improving the Bridge

Road, and there is a large hole to fill up.

He took chips from Hillyard's shipyard to put in the hole, intending to cover it with a layer of earth and gravel. This material was used because it was cheap and easily obtained, it being placed at the disposal of the Supervisor by Coun. Hillyard.

Mr. Arthur McDonald, a millman, did not like the smell of Coun. Hillyard's chips, and so with others, he made complaint, and the matter came up for investigation.

Dr. Barker appeared for the defence, and Arthur McDonald was prosecuting attorney. Mr. McDonald was the first witness, and he stated that his olfactory organs had been very much affected by these chips, that the chips were very rotten. Inspector Burns, of the Board of Health, was sent to examine the chips, and he smelt them before he reached the deposits—a cold, damp and unhealthy smell; but if he had not known of the chips, he said, he would not have noticed the smell. Dr. Glicks considered the smell as offensive to the public health, and Mr. Chesley's evidence was to the same effect. Then witnesses with less delicate olfactory nerves were called:

Dr. W. Christie, who had passed over the place several times and never noticed the smell, and B. S. Gilbert, Esq., who had examined the chips and thought them suitable for road making. There were several other witnesses, including Coun.

Wilson, who was so dead to smell that he had to get down on his hands and knees, and then could smell nothing. He had called Dr. Berryman's attention to the matter, and the investigation was adjudged until his opinion could be had.
