Easy does it!

The Peel-Halton unit of the Industrial Accident Prevention Association sponsored a fork-lift-truck competition over the weekend at the Chrysler plant in Mississauga. Here Salvatore Casullo of Loblaws Millcreek in Mississauga edges his way around the course. Bill Christie and Douglas Day led the competition and they will compete in the Ontario championship at Stratford.

Bus service urged for witnesses, jurors

Judge Barry Shapiro has called on Peel council to introduce a regional bus service to the county court house on Highway 10 in southern Brampton to provide transportation for witnesses and jurors.

In a letter to Peel's chairman, Lou Parsons, Shapiro said:

"The new building to the north of our court house also houses the family court, and on more than one occasion I have seen people, who appear to be in rather poor financial circumstances, using taxicabs to come to the public court houses."

Judge Shapiro noted that a government-inspection group had recently recommended the start of regular bus service to the court house location.

Although there have been repeated promises at the regional level to start up talks between the transit systems of Mississauga and Brampton to provide bus service to the court house, nothing concrete has been achieved.

"If we had a real regional transit system, this wouldn't be happening," Brampton Councillor Terry Miller said. Miller has long supported the creation of a full regional transit system, but financial limitations have kept such proposals on the shelf.

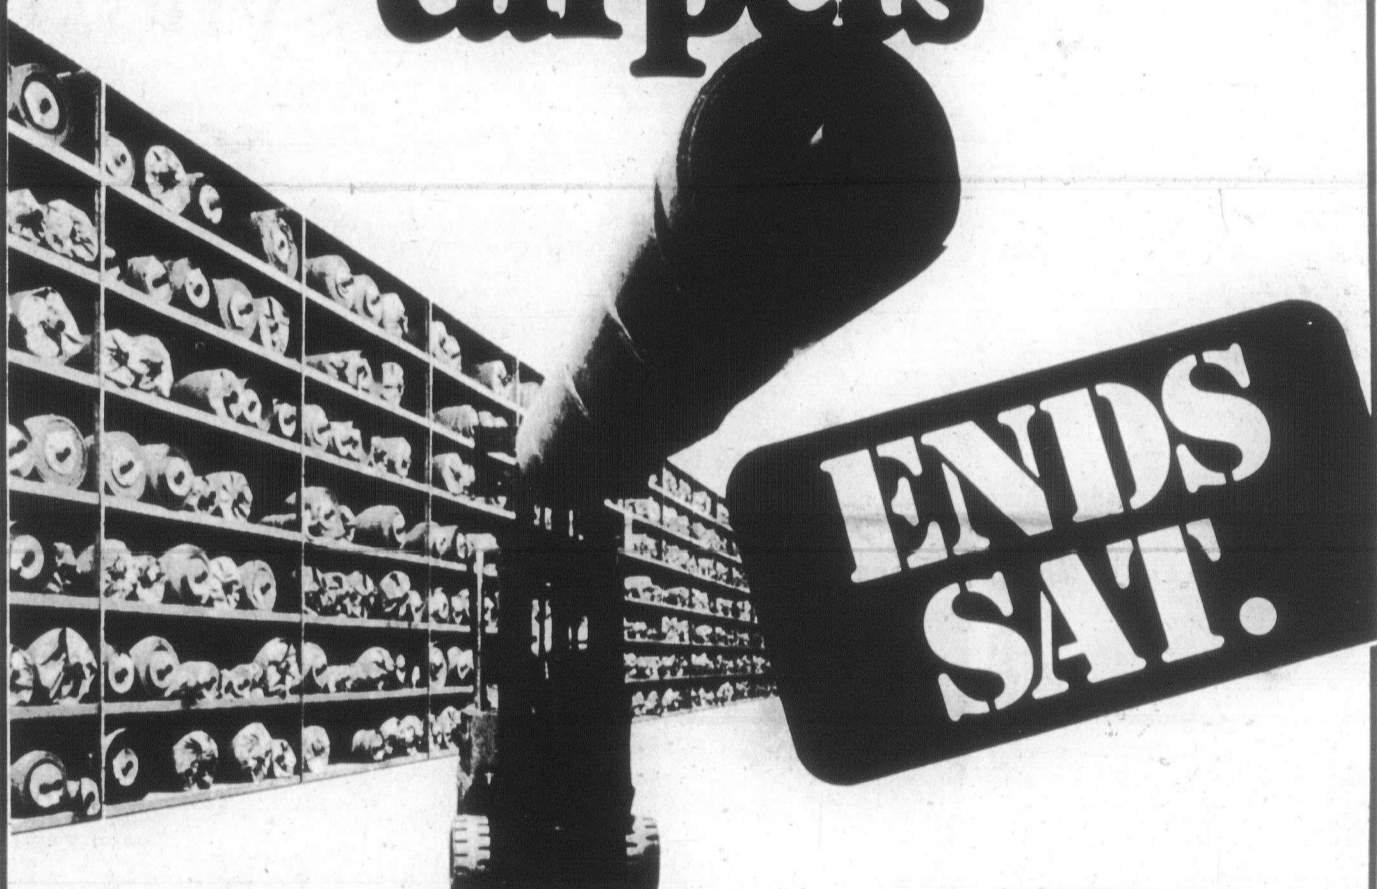

Mississauga Councillor Frank Bean said that Mississauga had already invited Brampton to talk about a limited north-south transit service between the two centres. It was agreed such a meeting should take place soon.

Brampton Councillor Margaret Mitchell said the problem might be solved if the provincial government could be convinced to fund a shuttle bus service between the two municipalities.

Earlier this year, Parsons told council he was sure there would be no problem for the two transit systems to work out a co-operatively operated bus line up Highway 10.
