

'It remains for ever true that the proper study of mankind is man ;
and even early man is not beneath contempt, especially when he proves to have had within him the makings of a great race, with its highest notions of duty and right, and all else that is noblest in the human soul.'

The Right Hon. SIR JOHN RHÛS.

PR

IN

EN

TH

AN