

DOWN DRAFT
Dome and Radiator

- A—Heavy cast-iron heating dome.
- B—Dust flue.
- C—Warm-air space entirely surrounding dome.
- D—Direct draft damper.
- E—Radiator.
- F—Where hot water attachments can be inserted.
- G—Down draft pipe.

Why do we make our heating dome of heavy cast iron?

Because steel will warp and bend. Cast iron won't.

THE DOWN DRAFT FURNACE generates such intense heat that it would destroy a steel dome in a comparatively short time. But cast iron absorbs the heat unharmed. Corrugations on dome add to the radiating surface. Made in one piece, it will expand and contract in perfect harmony with the fire pots. Will never warp or get out of place so as to permit gas and dust to escape.

This Dome will never burn out.

The durability of a furnace depends upon the lasting qualities of the dome, so that a furnace made with a cast-iron dome is much superior to one made with a steel dome. Our combined dome and radiator extracts and gives off the maximum amount of heat from the fire an amount greatly in excess of the heat from other furnaces.

Other points indicated in the above drawing are fully described in our catalogue, which will be mailed upon application.

THE SPICE OF LIFE.

Boy—My mother bought some slippers last week.
Man—Felt?
Boy—Yep. Three times already.

An Irish priest had labored hard with one of his flock to induce him to give up whiskey. "I tell you, Michael," said the priest, "whiskey is your worst enemy, and you should keep as far away from it as you can." "Me enemy, is it, Father?" responded Michael, "and it was Your Riverence's self that was tellin' us in the pulpit only last Sunday to love our enemies!" "So I was, Michael," rejoined the priest, "but I didn't tell you to swallow them."

THE PRIVILEGES OF OLD AGE.

Old age has its drawbacks, but it has also its privileges. Not the least of these is leisure; not idleness, for that way lie wretchedness and disintegration—but freedom from the stress of unlovely rivalry, and opportunity for the calm and moderate pursuit of congenial occupation. With its advent one may doff the armor, but not the apron, and choosing one's bench, work, not as a slave, but as a master.—U. S. Senator William P. Frye, in the March Circle.

VIGILANT FIDO.

In the barber-shop the scissors clicked merrily away, and the barber's dog lay on the floor close beside the chair, looking up intently all the time at the occupant who was having his hair cut.

"Nice dog, that," said the customer.

"He is, sir," said the barber.

"He seems very fond of watching you cut hair."

"It ain't that, sir," explained the barber, smiling. "Sometimes I make a mistake and take a little piece off a customer's ear!"

A certain peasant supplied a baker with three pounds of butter daily, and after some time the baker noticed that the butter never weighed three pounds. At last, he summoned him.

"Have you no scales at home?" the Judge asked.

"Yes," said the peasant.

"Have you weights?"

"Yes, but I never weigh the butter with them."

"Why?"

"Because since the baker buys my butter, I buy his bread, and as I always buy three pounds at a time, I weigh the butter with the bread."

He was acquitted.

AN INDORSEMENT.

A bride's mother presented her with a check on Christmas day. With a feeling of the utmost importance, she took it down to the bank in which her husband had opened an account for her. The cashier took the check, then handed it back politely, saying:

"Will you please indorse it, Madam?"

"Indorse it?" repeated the bride, puzzled.

"Yes, across the back, you know," replied the man, too busy to notice her bewilderment.

The bride carried the check to a desk, laid it face downward, and nibbled the end of a pen thoughtfully. Then inspiration came, and she wrote, triumphantly, across the back:

"For Fanny, from mother, Christmas, 1906."

A New Englander recently had occasion to engage a gardener. One morning two applicants appeared,—one a decidedly decent-looking man, and the other of much less prepossessing appearance and manner.

After very little hesitation, the man of the house chose the latter applicant.

A friend who was present, evinced surprise at the selection, asking:

"Has that man ever worked for you before?"

"No," replied the other: "in fact, I never saw either of them until to-day."

"Then why did you choose the shorter man?" The other had a much better face."

"Face!" exclaimed the proprietor of the place, in disgust. "Let me tell you that, when you pick out a gardener, you want to go by his overalls. If they're patched on the knees you want him. If the patch is on the seat of his trousers, you don't."

Brains and commonsense make a good manager, and good management is three-fourths of successful farming.

AT THE MUSICAL.

Clara.—She puts lots of feeling into her singing, doesn't she?
Ferd.—Yes, but it must be awful to feel that way.

The second day drew to its close with the twelfth jurymen still unconvinced.

"Well, gentlemen," said the court officer, entering quietly, "shall I, as usual, order twelve dinners?"
"Make it," said the foreman, "eleven dinners and a bale of hay."

COURT OR CAUGHT.

"Sold your automobile, eh?" exclaimed Wyss. "What was the trouble?"
"Couldn't control it," explained Acher. "When I ran fast it took me to the police court, and when I ran slowly it didn't take me anywhere."

A son of the Emerald Isle, on landing at a wharf in New York, saw lying there a huge anchor. For the next three days he stood by watching the anchor. "What are you doing here?" asked a workman one day. "Sure, sor," was the reply. "I want to see the man who can handle that pick."

"Getting-on so often means losing everything in life that brightens and elevates, crushes the best qualities of head and heart, that it would be a good thing if we all stopped now and again and gazed steadily beneath the glittering veil which hides the inner workings of the 'getting-on' craze of the day."

TAINTED MONEY.

The big touring-car had just whizzed by with a roar like a gigantic rocket, and Pat and Mike turned to watch it disappear in a cloud of dust.

"Them chug wagons must cost a heap av cash," said Mike. "The rich is fairly burnin' money."

"An' be the smell av it," sniffed Pat, "it must be thot tainted money we do be hearin' so much about."

"Out in Downs a little Swede boy went to school, and the teacher asked his name."

"Young Olsen," he replied.

"How old are you," asked the teacher.

"Ay not no how old ay bane."

"Well, when were you born?" continued the teacher.

"Ay not born at all, ay got stepmutter."

BRIDGET WHIST.

"Phwere hov yez been this avenin'?" asks O'Tunder of O'Toole.

"Sure, I've been playing Bridget whist. 'Tis a foine game, it is."

"Bridget whist? An' how do yez play thot?"

"Oi sit in the kitchen wid Bridget and ate pie an' cake an' chicken, and when Bridget hears the mistress comin' she says, 'Whist,' and Oi hide in the pantry."

"If you please, ma'am," said the servant from Dublin, "the cat's had chickens."

"Nonsense, Gertrude!" returned the mistress of the house. "You mean kittens. Cats don't have chickens."

"Was them chickens or kittens that master brought home last night?"

"Chickens, of course."

"Well, ma'am, them's what the cat has had."

One of the old governors of the Carolinas was a man who had lived a farmer's life most of the time until he was elected, and his wife, having never seen a steamboat or a railroad, and having no wish to test either one, refused to accompany her husband to the Capital. When the governor reached his destination, he found that almost all the other officials were accompanied by their wives, and he sent an imperative message to his brother to "fetch Melinda along."

The brother telegraphed: "She's afraid even to look at the engine."

The governor read the message and pondered over it for a few moments. At the end of that time, he sent off the following command:

"Bill, you blindfold Melinda and back her on to the train."
