"Why, don't you think I know that my wife is the nicest housewife in all the peighborhood?"

Again: "Do see those boys! wading through every mud-hole and ditch! I declare, they are enough to wear out the patience of Job Only yesterday Eddie tumbled down in the mul, and I had every rag of his clothes to wash; they look as dirty as pigs."

"How lucky it is they have neat mother! They are no nicer children or neater dressed than yours, Anna. I wonder how you manage to keep them so?"

"It is no wonder at all; I work all the time." "Of course you do, but they won't be children long, Anna!" "I should hope not; it would kill me if they were. It is enough to vex a saint to have to wash so five great tearing boys to wash and mend for !"

"They are none too many, Anna; we have none to spare; they are nice, healthy, good children."

"If you had to wait on them as I do you would sing a different song. Mea never know anything about the care of children, but women have i all to do."

"I know it is wearing, but after all, the little fellows pay their way they bring love and sunshine with

"Pshaw! I cannot see the sun shine they bring; they fetch dirt and confusion; I used to keep my house in order, but just look at it now! Everything is topsy-turvy"

But if Mrs. Hyde could not see the sunshine the little people brought, she saw the sha lows that fell ove the house when two of them sickened and died. Maybe she thought that their little muddy boots would never track her clean floor again, but if she did think of that, it was never known, and she only fretted more. "The two sweetest and smartest of the boys were the ones that were taken-it is always so,"

"I never saw any difference in my children, Annie; they were all alike precious to me. It was hard to part with any, I could not have said that I have a choice. God took those He chose-it was not for us to say"-her husband remonstrated.

"There it is -no choice! as if anybody couldn't see that you always thought more of Rube than of Eddie! You always took Rube when you went to ride; I should think you would have something to think of now, Eddie is gone."

"I always tried to do my duty by my children; I do not think I have to reflect upon any injustice to any of them."

He did not say that he took Rube because his mother fretted at him most and he was more roguish than his quiet brother Eddie, who was always a delicate boy.

Years passed and the three boys advanced towards manhood. They were full of life and loved fun, and

To A Waterfowl BY WILLIAM CULLEN BRYANT

Whither, midst falling dew, glow the heavens with the Far, through their rosy depths, pursue
Thy solitary way?

Vainly the fowler's eye
Might mark thy distant flight to do wrong,
As, darkly painted on the crim
Thy figure floats along. Seek'st thou the plashy brink

Of weedy lake, or marge of river wide, Or where the rocking billows rise and sink
On the chafed ocean side? There is a Power, whose care Teaches thy way along that pat coast,—

The desert and illimitable air, —
Lone wandering, but not lost. All day thy wings have fanned At that far height, the cold thin atm sphere;

Yet stoop not, weary, to the welcome land, Though the dark night is near. And soon that toil shall end, on shalt thou find a summer home, an rest,

And scream among thy fellows; reeds shall bend
Soon o'er thy sheltered nest. Valuable Building heart Deeply hath sunk the lesson thou hast given, And shall not soon depart. Hs who, from zone to zone, Guides through the boundless sky thy certain flight,

In the long way that I must tread alone,
Will lead my steps aright.
