and its functions. Indeed there is unfortunately, a disposition in some quarters to look upon a position in the Council as being, if not beneath the dignity of leading men in the different communities, at least not worth striving after—one not to be coveted. It is of the greatest importance that all the monies collected throughout the County shall be properly expended and accounted for—that all public matters coming before the Council shall be adjudicated upon in a manner alike creditable to the County and in the best interests of its records and this can only be done.
