John Shell Is The Oldest Man In U.S.A

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Feb. 18.— Is the modern woman who steps blithely to face the winds of winter wearing low-cut shoes and transparent stockings flirting with the undertaker? When she leaves her slender neck and alabaster chest uncovered to the assault of zero weather is she inviting illness?

Not if the philosophy of Uncle John Shell, who lives in Greasy Creek, far back in the Kentucky mountains, is sound. And Uncle John himself is a living demonstration that his mode is fundamentally correct.

Uncle John is 131 years old. He is believed to be the oldest man in the world. He has the records to prove that he was born in Tennessee in 1788.

Now, Uncle John has never seen the modern "flapper" and knows nothing about the foibles of today's fashions. Where he lives it is the homespun stockings that prevail, and not the silk ones. Women there wear calico and gingham, and gowns that reveal vast areas of the female torso are unknown. Uncle John was not discussing modern fashions from either the moral or physical standpoint when he unfolded his theories of dressing. He was talking about himself.

When a man lives to be 131 years old and shows signs of continuing to inhabit this earth for several years to come, folks who feel themselves wearing out under the strain of modern life want to know how he did it. Uncle John's answer is simple:

ply this:
"Get plenty of fresh air and work hard. And don't bundle up just because the weather is a little chilly."

Uncle John seldom wears shoes. They hurt his feet. In all his 131 years he has not worn it more than half a dozen shoes. He never wraps up his neck, but winter and summer goes about with his shirt unbuttoned at the throat and part of his chest exposed. The reason so many people have colds, he says, is because they bundle up their necks.

The theories of health and longevity that Uncle John promulgates are not derived from books on health or hygiene. Uncle John can't read books. He never has learned the mysteries of the alphabet. His ideas are solely the result of his own experiences, and he is living proof that in his case, at least, they will work.

His mode of life has made of Uncle John a remarkably vigorous old man considering the amazing span of years he has enjoyed. He moves about his little mountain home with a sprightliness of half his years. He does chores that many a man of sixty would deem too arduous. His handiwork is vigorous; his movements are quick and his eyes still gleam with the fire of a youth long past. He is five feet five inches tall and weighs 103 pounds, and his body is wiry and erect. Only his hair of fine white hair and the multitude of wrinkles that crease his wizened face give proof of his extreme old age.

In his youth Uncle John was a noted hunter in the Kentucky mountains. He still likes the pursuit of game and can aim with a rifle with the steadiness of a man decades younger. He likes to fish, and now and then turns his hands to a bit of trapping.

A little matter of a hundred years ago Uncle John was famous in his locality as a maker of rifles. A recent article describing a collection of Kentucky rifles gave prominence to guns made by Uncle John Shell. He still owns a flint lock gun that he made long before the Civil War.

Very few men who fought in the civil war are still alive. The ranks of survivors of that conflict are yearly growing thinner. Yet Uncle John was prevented from fighting in the Civil War because military authorities considered him too old to be a soldier. He can remember when George Washington died.

Uncle John is living now with his second wife. His first wife died young—she was only ninety. About the Kentucky cabin where the aged man lives there plays a lively youngster of five years who is Uncle John's latest progeny and his chief companion. He is teaching Albert, as his son is named, the secrets of the woods man and hunter—how to hold a rifle, bait a trap and manipulate a fishing rod.

Uncle John has never seen a movie show or an airplane. Since he came to Kentucky from Tennessee in his extreme youth he has never been outside the state. And he does not plan to leave it for in the Kentucky mountains he has found long life, health and happiness. He wants nothing else.

BUY CLOVER SEED EARLY

Prime red clover seed was quoted at $35.55 per bushel on the Toledo market of the 6th instant. Toronto prices then ranged about $3.00 per bushel in advance of Toledo prices. Clover seed that would grade "prime" on the Toledo market could be bought in Toronto at $38.50 and, because of exchange conditions, delivered to United States points at approximately $33.00 per bushel, or about $2.50 less than the Toledo price. The money situation, short supplies and a livelier demand in the United States will explain the heavy exports of clover seed.

The price of red clover seed has advanced almost $14 per bushel on the Toledo market since May last. The world supply will not be sufficient to meet normal requirements. In these circumstances, Canadian farmers who delay the purchase of their clover seed requirements until seeding time may be unable to obtain supplies at any price.

BREACH OF PROMISE SUIT FIRST MAN HAS HEARD OF PROPOSAL TO MARRY GIRL

PITTSBURGH, Feb. 20.— Anna Rogers has entered suit against G. W. Boone for $25,000 damages because he refuses to carry out his promise of marriage. Boone, on the other hand, in answering the complaint, declares that it is the first time that he knew of a proposal made to Miss Rogers, but, that it probably being a "leap year" proposal, he is too gallant to refuse and will marry the young woman on sight. He further declares that he has asked Miss Rogers to wed since the suit was filed, but that she consistently refuses, yet the alienation suit against Boone has been listed for trial.

Miss Rogers refuses to talk about the suit. It is the boast of the dairymen of Holland that in their country there is a cow to every inhabitant.

It is estimated that there are 14,000 Japanese in the United States, the majority of them in California.

During our twenty-five years in business, Canada has made wonderful progress in education, refinement and wealth.

The scale of living and the tastes of the people are more luxurious than a quarter of a century ago.

Realizing this we have decided that—in addition to our well-known standard brands of Red Rose Tea, the sales of which are increasing faster than ever before—the time is opportune to introduce a tea of extra quality. It is an Orange Pekoe Tea of very fine quality under the popular Red Rose brand, and called Red Rose Orange Pekoe Tea—a special tea of extra quality for people who are willing to pay a little extra price.

To ensure the quality and success of this new tea we have concentrated on it all the resources, the experience and the advantages possessed by our big organization.

The Orange Pekoe Teas we use are selected with a knowledge born of long experience in buying teas abroad.

Red Rose Orange Pekoes are grown on the best plantations;
—from tested seed;
—on carefully cultivated soil;
—at a high elevation (mountain grown teas are very superior to low-land teas.)

They are gathered at the time of the year when the flavor is most fully developed in the leaves.

The manufacture and final preparation are carefully and skillfully done.

When brewed, Red Rose Orange Pekoe Tea has all the characteristics of fine quality tea.

It has a bright, sparkling amber color in the cup.

The aroma is delicate and delightful.

After the liquid is poured off, the leaves in the pot are a greenish copper color.

The flavor is of rare charm and distinction. The more cultivated your taste the more you will appreciate it.

The strength is rich, satisfying and invigorating.

Red Rose Orange Pekoe Tea is sold only in our sealed waxed board cartons which fully protect its fine quality.

Ask for it by the full name: Red Rose Orange Pekoe Tea. The words "Orange Pekoe" are in orange on our new waxed board cartons.

Our well-known Red Rose package, the sale of which is increasing faster than ever before. Red Rose consists chiefly of Assam teas, the richest and strongest in the world and therefore very economical.
(The Red Rose Orange Pekoe package is a little different in design.)
