T. of T. The York who had stood by him so long and faithfully, the premier alluded to the petition which had been filed against himself and colleagues. Certain persons had charged that the election was procured by illegal and improper means - not that the unsuccessful candidates had abstained from violation of the law, but that the government candidates owed their return to these illegal means. He pointed out that it was quite impossible for any person elected to the house, if petitioned against, to retain his seat under the present election law. He had always considered it a most unfair and unjust thing that persons who had themselves been guilty of extreme impropriety should have the power of thus injuring and annoying their successful opponents. The petition which had been filed had not been prosecuted with a great deal of vigor. It was thought that it could have come on in the month of July; had such been the case he and his friends thought of going into the trial for the purpose of showing that on the part of the pe-

They were giving their opponents the utmost possible notice of their intentions; it remained to be seen whether they would accept the gage of battle. His own impression was that the Election Would be called on toward the latter part of the present month of October.

Mr. Blair then reviewed the history of the present government. It had come into power in 1883 and down at least until the last session very little fault has been found with it from any quarter. There had been very little opposition in the house. When the government was first organized there was a very powerful opposition arrayed against it, the majority of the government being only three or four. That opposition dwindled away until at the close of the session of 1889 it only numbered six or seven in a house of 41. That opposition which then confronted the government arose almost entirely upon two grounds - the high stumpage rate and the refusal of the government to embark upon another extensive scheme of railway subsidizing. The government felt that the latter would involve the Avonmore and Cameo, with cargoes of Mr. | war against the government in that quarter. These have not been placed upon the market gained six members which in a division but are being piled on the shipper's account | meant a difference of 12 in the house. Mr. Blair described the repeated efforts which the people of the north had made to secure concessions, and how the government had told them that as soon as the revenue would admit of it their claims would be favorably considered. It was claimed by the opposition press that the four men elect-A. He described the delegation sent by the of this city. The marriage took place in people of the north to Fredericton, as well as the efforts of Mr. Stevens in Northumber-D. It had been suggested by some of his Blair's) own friends that he would have covered himself with glory if he had gone down valorously flying the high stumpage flag. He would assure his friends that he would have enjoyed no such opportunity. His political experience enabled him to forsee clearly how the question would have worked. The Northumberland men would have gone with the opposition, and when the house met the opposition would have carried a want of confidence motion in which the word stumpage would not have been heard of, and in which the intentions of the opposition, who had captured Northumberland, would have been carefully and successfully concealed. The vote of confidence being carried of course the house would be adjourned for a while to permit of the election of the members of the new government, and when the house met again, the new government would explain that they would require time to mature their policy, and could say nothing. A short ession would be held, supplies granted, the members sent home and during the summer the reduction would be made. Next year the question would be a dead issue, and instead of having won any glory, York ounty would be out in the cold, and he (Blair) would have been denounced as incapable or laughed at for allowing myself to be outgeneralled by persons whose only object was to get into office at any cost. The question of the rate of stumpage was not one of principle, any more than was the action of the dominion government in placing a duty upon certain fruit one year and taking it off the next; it was purely a matter of detail. Knowing very well what his native county of York as well as other outlying counties would have to expect, and how their in terests would suffer, were the reins of power handed over to an aggressive and pretentious constituency like St. John, he felt that there was no other course open to the government. (Applause) He would have been laughed at as an incompetent and a bungler had he allowed this combination between St. John and Northumberland to take place. He was not going to say that he would not personally have preferred to see the rate of stumpage emain for a while as it was, but the lumber nterest was the most important interest in the province and anything the government could reasonably do they should do for that nterest. The lumbermen in the present condition of the market have none too easy a job to make both ends meet. The constitution of the commission which the government had appointed, Mr. Randolph, Mr. Todd and Mr. Ritchie, was above criticism The speaker then reviewed the "whitewash oill." which he showed to be almost identical in principle with the law that had been in andisputed operation in Ontario for years. He alluded to the particularly vicious and abusive character of the opposition with which he was assailed as shown in such as the Leary dock charge, which only eight members out of a house of 41 could be found to say was not malicious. The real intention of the opposition in making that charge was to entangle him up in a mass of charges which did not apply to him at all, the investigation into which would not when the house was ready to rise, but would be left hanging over his head when another election came to be run in York. Even Mr. Haning ton, who certainly conducted the investiga tion in a bullying way, said he was glad to know that he (Blair) was entirely exonerated from the charge which was made. He was satisfied that until the people of York had such evidence presented to them as would justify them in hanging a dog, they would not condemn him because of the malice of his enemies. He regretted that the politics of the province were being brought to things like these. But the issue was not of his making and he did not think the people of York would approve of the maker of them or his motives. An opposition, whose only shadow of policy was that they were united by fair means or foul to pull down the government sent very strong claims for consideration subsidies to the Northern & Western railway and Woodstock railway, the bridge, the new departmental building, the deaf and dumb asylum and other public works. The opposition had stated that the last election was brought on in January because the government had been so reckless and corrupt that it was afraid to meet the house. Yet when the house met and every item of expenditure had been gone into by a committee, which included three of their most able and active opponents, not a single item had been found worthy of criticism save

A paltry Expenditure for Christmas Poultry for the poor inmates of the asylum at St John. (Applause.) The government had now their ticket formed for the coming contest. One of its former members, Mr. Bellamy, for personal and private interests, had concluded not to run at this time. Mr. Bellamy had been a most painstaking and honest representative. He would have been glad to have served his term out, but having been obliged to resign had announced his intention not to offer again. The gentleman selected in his place was a most popular and worthy man and would add much strength country in an expenditure which it was to the governmet ticket. At the present not able to bear. Here is to be the battle ground between the two great parties; if the people of my own county take sides against me, of course the battle is over and the victory is theirs. St. John is a large constituency, a rich constituency, and some of them have boasted that they would send their thousands up here into York. They can send all they can raise, but there are not enough people in York who can be bought with their bribes to enable the grasping faction in the city by the sea to say that they have triumphed over Smith, came up here last winter and told the LEGISLATIVE BUILDING, the people in the stores that within a week St. John would have captured the government; but they did not get it and I don't think they are going to get it. It had been the constant endeavour of St. John to destroy and belittle Fredericton, it had tried to take away the courts and the seat of government with all the loss and hardship McLaughlin, of that city. TO THE ELECTORS COUNTY OF YORK.

Gentlemen:—It seems to have been determined by certain persons in this constituency, whose personal animosities are stronger than their sense of fairness, or their regard for the true interests of this County, that the election in January shall not be allowed to stand, and that the representatives whom you then returned, shall have to make a choice of either throwing up their seats or going through an election trial with all the expense, annoyance and personal bitterness which such a trial would occasion, not only to the members elect and their not only to the members elect and their friends, but also to the agents and friends of the defeated candidates.

You, gentlemen, do not need to be told that it is not a difficult thing to set aside an that it is not a difficult thing to set aside an election. It only requires one elector in a constituency, who is sufficiently malicious for the purpose, to set the law in motion and make the position of a member almost entirely unbearable. Many of you may remember that on the day of declaration, a threat was made by one of the defeated candidates that the election would be contested. We confess that notwithstanding this threat, and that the petition was immediate. this threat, and that the petition was immediately filed, we did entertain the hope un til a recent period, that wiser counsels would prevail, and that the large majorities by which we were severally returned over our opponents, would have afforded us some protection against the personal hostility to one or more of us, by which the parties to these proceedings have been throughout inspired.

This hope, however, has not been realized and a date in December having been recently fixed for the trial of the petition, we have felt it our duty to determine, without delay, the course of action it would be proper for us under the circumstances to take.

Although realizing the difficulty of successfully resisting an election petition under the existing law, no matter how carefully the candidates and their agents may have striven to keep themselves within it, we have been much tempted to go down to trial in order to publicly expose the conduct of the petitioning parties who falsely pretend to have abstained on their part from illegal practices of every kind; but there are considerations of both public and private conveniences which impel us to a different course.

We have an appeal open to us against the order of the Judge setting the petition down for trial, upon the ground that the adjournment of the case in July last put an end to all the proceedings, but our desire to avoid another election, although considerable, is not so great that we care to engage in further litigation, or would wish to be considered indebted for our seats to the decision of the court on a technical question of law.

sion of the court on a technical question of law.

We have, therefore, concluded to vacate our seats, and will at an early day place our resignations in the proper hands. We promptly make our decision in this regard known, so that ample notice may be given the public, and that there may be no pretence on the part of our opponents that they were taken by surprise, or placed at a disadvantage for want of time to organize their forces.

Gentlemen, you have not failed to notice the savage warfare that is being waged against the government in the newspaper press of St. John. The question of the appointment of the police magistrate has served its purpose, and is now thrown aside. No political weapon having the semblance of a principle remains in the armory of our property of the semblance of the principle, remains in the armory of our op There is nothing in their fight against the

Dr. Hyde, who takes Dr. Stockleys place temporarily, has arrived and presided at the English examination. The other professors are all here.

There is nothing in their nght against the government but a jealous intolerance of the influence and prominence of this County in the executive government, and a struggle on the part of St. John for political supremacy throughout the province.

Happily for this and other sections of the province the heavest to be reached as the province of the suprementation. rovince, the battle is to be rought upon your own ground, and it rests with your-selves whether you or they win the victory. If it be true, as the St. John opposition press allege, that the electors of York are onging for a chance to displace the government, and substitute for it one more in harmony with the pretensions of St. John, then, gentlemen, you cannot too soon be af-forded an opportunity to so declare, and we to learn that such is your will.

CARD. TO THE ELECTORS

COUNTY OF YORK

Gentlemen: - As vacancies are about of curring in your representation in the local legislature, through the resignation of the four sitting members, we take early occasion to announce our intended candidacy for the vacant seats.

The justification put forward for taking the proceedings which will result in a new election in a few weeks, is, that you were induced to vote as you did in January last, by corrupt means. Our candidature, gentlemen, does not rest for its support, as will that of our opponents, upon the hope that this great constituency will declare such to have been the case. We repudiate the imputation that the immense diate the imputation that the immense majorities by which the successful candi-dates were then returned, were not the free expression of the electorate, and we appeal to you to re-affirm the decision you then inmistakeably pronounced against transferring the conduct of public affairs to the ns composing the opposition in the persons composing the opposition in the present legislature.

The people of this County have always been able to pride themselves upon the influential position in the government and legislature occupied by their representatives, but they have never acted towards other portions of the Province as if the boundaries of York comprised the whole Province, or exhibited a narrow sectional jealousy of the influence of other Counties.

When, therefore, you find such a spirit mainly inspiring the opposition, which has its chief seat and strength in St. John, is it not important in your interest to elect it not important in your interest to elect representatives who will act loyally and unitedly together to sustain a government, the existence of which is seriously menaced only because of your influential position in

We do not claim that the administration of affairs for the past seven or eight years has been wholly free from error, but we do maintain that your interests have not been neglected, and if York county has been hereneglected, and if York county has been here-tofore well served by your representatives, and by the government, will it be wise to hazard a change at the present juncture? We venture to think that to displace the government at present, must necessarily be hurtful to the welfare of the County, and if hurtful to the welfare of the County, and if favored with your suffrages, we will endeavor to serve you as faithfully in the future, as you have been served in the past.

Respectfully, yours,
A. G. BLAIR,
WM. WILSON,
JOHN ANDERS ON,
THOS. H. COLTER.
