An Irreparable Loss.

Even if we discount says the Bulletin, largely the reports published in the daily press concerning the sack of Louvain, Belgium, by the victorious German soldiery, we cannot but regard the destruction of that beautiful city, with all its wealth of historic associations and priceless treasures of art and literature, as little less than a world calamity.

Without entering into a discussion of the causes which led to the burning of Louvain as a military measure, it may be questioned whether or not such extreme measures were warranted in reprisal for whatever hostile acts had been committed by the inhabitants. The old saying that "all is fair in war" should not be accepted in all its had literalness in this age of boasted enlightenment.

Reports differ as to the extent of the destruction wrought in Louvain by the German army. St. Peter's church, the City Hall and the Catholic University are said to be among the institutions destroyed by the enemy. All are historic structures. St. Peter's church is the most imposing religious edifice in Louvain. The City Hall is one of the finest examples of Gothic architecture in the world. The Catholic University founded in 1425, with its various departments, is regarded as one of the greatest seats of learning in the world. Its library of ancient manuscripts, rare books and costly editions is priceless, and, if destroyed, can never be replaced.

Nothing definite is said in the dispatches about the American University at Louvain; but it is probable that, being under the protection of the United States, it was spared by the enemy. It is an institution dear to the hearts of hundreds of priests in America who finished their education within its walls.

Later on, when the fuller and more accurate details are received from the destroyed Louvain, the full extent of the destruction wrought in the city will become known and if it prove to be a result of vandalism, rather than of righteous war, the civilized world will not hesitate to heap merited execration on those who were responsible for it.

The Race of Heroes is Not Dead.

Among the many details of the progress of the war that are appearing in the daily press there is much of a thrilling and heroic character. An incident is related of the first engagement in which the British took part. A body of English cavalry suddenly came in sight of some German cuirassiers, and immediately, without waiting to fire, charged with full speed. Both sides fought desperately. The trooper in question at the close of the engagement found himself wounded. On being asked how he got his wound, he replied: "I dunno. The first thing I knew was that my sword was sticking through a German's elbow and his through my wrist, but it had not cut any tendons." He added proudly, "I'll be out in two or three days."

The incident is another example of the curious psychological phenomenon of man's insensibility to pain in moments of intense mental excitement. It has, however, a much deeper significance. What must be expected of a struggle in which millions of such are engaged, especially when their courage has been heightened by racial hatred, lust for battle and a growing resolve to avenge fancied or real atrocities? Certainly the race of heroes is not dead. And yet while we bow in admiration before such bravery, we shudder to think that the armies that are fighting all over Europe are made up of men like these. Is such reckless daring a specimen of what is to go on for months? If so, who will dare, when the war is over, to count up the number of homes filled with maidens and mothers weeping for their loved ones and refusing to be consoled—America.

Westminster Version of the Sacred Scriptures.

The New Testament. Volume III, Part II. The First Epistle to the Corinthians. By the Rev. Cuthbert Lattey, S. J., New York: Longmans, Green & Co. $0.30.

Few of our Catholics seem to know that there is in course of preparation a Catholic translation of the entire Bible from the original tongues. The present installment of this great enterprise contains the First Epistle of St. Paul to the Corinthians, the translation of which is from the pen of the Rev. Cuthbert Lattey, S. J., Professor of Sacred Scripture in the House of Studies of the English Province of the Society of Jesus. The general editorship of the Version is under the care of Father Lattey and of Father Joseph Keating, S. J., editor of the Month. An interesting introduction provides us with some useful data about Corinth and the establishment of the Church in that city, to the members of which St. Paul wrote this Epistle probably in the early part of 55 A. D.

Readers of St. Paul who have found difficulty in following his course of thought, because of the way in which the sentences are often broken by the verse-division in our ordinary English Testament, will welcome a text so clearly arranged in paragraphs and sections. The verse-numbers are placed in the margin. The headings of the sections and the notes are most helpful in bringing out the sense. It has long been a matter of wonder to the present writer how the ordinary editions of the Douay version could be supposed to comply with the Church's regulations in regard to the explanatory notes demanded in all editions approved by bishops. In the present version the points explained really assist one in understanding the text, and, on the other hand, the latter is not overloaded with erudite comment.

The first appendix is devoted to a consideration of the Vulgate reading of I Cor. xv, 51, which differs from the Greek text admitted by scholars to be correct. The difference gives occasion to some useful remarks on the authority asserted for the Vulgate by the Council of Trent. In the second appendix, Father A. Keogh, S. J., Professor of Church History and Canon Law, discusses the ministry in the Apostolic Church, and the various terms employed by the Apostle to designate those in authority as teachers and rulers of the faithful.

We hope that our American priests and lay will interest themselves in making this version of Holy Scripture known to our people. The reading of the sacred writers can not fail to be of great spiritual profit to the faithful. Many have hitherto excused themselves from such reading because they feared to misunderstand the Word of God and needed more aid than the ordinary editions provided. In this version the happy arrangement of the text is itself an interpretation and when the work is completed we shall have "a readable Bible." If the parts are purchased as they appear, the expense will not be heavy. The number of Catholic scholars engaged in co-operation with the reverend editors leads us to hope that in a few years we shall have a worthy translation of the sacred text.—J. C. in America.

Divine Providence.

Providence is the care God takes of His creatures. "For thou hast done the things of old, and hast devised one thing after another; and what thou hast devised hath been done. For all Thy ways are prepared and in Thy providence Thou hast placed Thy judgments" (Judith, IX, 4-5). "Say not before the angel; there is no providence; lest God be angry at thy words, and destroy the work of thy hands" (Ecc. V, 5). "Behold the fowls of the air, for they sow not, neither do they reap, nor gather into barns; yet your heavenly Father feedeth them" (St. Matt. VI, 27).

God is infinitely wise, and so He acts in View of some end; being infinitely good, He must needs care for the creatures He has made. This, what reason tells us, so that to deny providence is to contradict reason, and deny God Himself. The world itself tells us that it was made by a Being of Wisdom, who adjusted means to ends and all things to one final purpose. The multitude of creatures, so wonderfully varied in perfections and qualities, are governed by fixed laws. Science does nothing more than study those laws. Nature is a book which the scientist tries to decipher; the greatest scientists say with Shakespeare's soothsayer: "In nature's infinite book of secrecy, a little can I read." All the forces, all the laws which science studies work together for a general and common end. Human reason sees plainly, and confesses gladly, that this wonderful harmony of the universe points to a Mind of supreme wisdom as its cause. Creation is the army of God; its marvellous discipline and efficiency and beauty tell of the wisdom of its Divine Commander. The Lord of Hosts is the King of Glory.

Providence foresees and provides. It arranges beforehand the plan of creation, appoints for each creature its proper end, and that common end for all, and that common end is the Glory of God. Wisdom reacheth from end to end mightily; and ordereth all things sweetly. (Wis. 8:1). The mind of God takes in at a glance all things, past, present and to come; all are before him. "Behold O Lord, Thou hast known all things, the last, and those of old" (Ps. 88:5). Almighty God loves His creatures. "For thou lovest all things that are, and hatest none of the things which Thou hast made; for Thou didst not appoint or make anything, hating it. And how could anything endure if Thou wouldst not? Or how could anything be preserved if not called for by Thee?" (Wis. II, 25-26). "When Thou openest Thy hand, all things shall be filled with good." (Ps. 103:28). God is Almighty and can do all His goodness prompts Him to do for His creatures. God is great and greatly to be praised, and wonderful in His power, and of His magnificence there is no end.

God made the little and the great, and He hath equal care of all, (Wis. 6:5). Are not two sparrows sold for a farthing? and not one of them shall fall on the ground without your Father's knowledge and permission. But the very hairs of your head are numbered. (Matt. 10:29-30). God is supreme Ruler of all things. The starry heavens with their mighty masses sweeping with unimaginable speed through the unexplored infinities of space, show forth His glory, being the work of His hand, or rather His creatures called forth into being out of the abyss of nothingness by a single act of His All-powerful Will, and preserved in orderly and harmonious movement by His Power and Wisdom. He is Ruler, Lord and Master over the mind and heart of man; and has dominion over all the nations.

WAS BOTHERED WITH BILIOUSNESS AND SOUR STOMACH FOR 20 YEARS

Sour Stomach and Biliousness are caused by a sluggish Liver, for when it does not work properly, it holds back the bile, which is so essential to promote the movement of the bowels, and the bile gets into the blood instead of passing through the usual channel, thus causing many stomach and bowel troubles.

Mr. Charles Pettit, 256 1/2 Richmond Street, London, Ont., writes:—"I feel it my duty to write you a few lines in regard to your Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills. I have been bothered with Biliousness and Sour Stomach for twenty years until a year ago I started to use Laxa-Liver Pills, and I have not been bothered since. I wish to let it be known to all those who suffer as I did."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are 25 cents per vial or 5 vials for $1.00. For sale at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.
